YOUNG MEN'S CLUB

MEETING TOMORROW TO PLAN FOR ORGANIZATION.

Members of the Commercial Association Will Meet With Young Men to Discuss Plans for Club Room.

It is desired that a large attendance of the members of the Commercial Association and the young men interested in the move for a young men's club be present at the Commercial rooms at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

At this time a meeting has been called to discuss the plans and see just what lines will be taken in carrying out the plan for the club. It is no wa settled fact that most of the young men of the town are in favor of the club and most of them are in favor of joining with the Commercial Association which makes the move almost an assured thing. As stated before the young men have been casting about for some time to see if something could not be done to give them a place to spend the evenings and their time and to join with the Commercial Association in preference to branching out on their own account is thought to be the proper thing.

At this meeting Sunday it is proposed to get the consensus of opinion of those present, which will help the committee now arranging the first steps toward organizing. This committee will meet next Tuesday and make their report on what will be necessary for the club to expend in fitting up larger rooms than now occupied by the association and on the price of the initiation fees and dues. Until that time it will not be known publicly what it will cost to start the move going and then if found at all practicable the next steps will be to get a suitable place to install the paraphernalia for the entertainment of the young men.

OREGON LIVESTOCK SITUATION.

C. J. Mills, of the O. R. & N. Tells a Clear Story of What the Stock-raiser is Doing and What He Should Do.

C. J. Mills, livestock agent for the O. R. & N., who is in close touch with the stock interests of this state, and who is in a position to know actual conditions, from his contact with the producer, the shipper and the consumer, was seen by a Journal representative today, says the Oregon Daily Journal.

Mr. Mills is enthusiastic in his branch of the transportation business and feels a keen interest in the stock industry from the pasture and range to the great stock markets of the country. Viewing the livestock industry of Oregon as one of her permanent and bountiful resources, it gives more promise of future growth and improvement than any other of her multitude of industries. The changed conditions are especially benefiting this business.

The Sheep Industry.
"Speaking of the sheep industry," said Mr. Mills, "this has been one of the most prosperous years on record in Oregon. The crop of lambs, despite the blistering squalls and cold rains that visited our ranges about the beginning of our lambing this season, was over 85 per cent this year. By this I mean that 95 per cent increase lived and became an addition to our flocks. Other localities had as high an increase, but it was not saved. By an increase we mean the number of lambs that lived, to become available for future demands, and not the number dropped. On account of drought and short crops in the great feed producing central states, the shipments of sheep have been somewhat below the usual amount. As a result the ranges and markets at home are in a somewhat congested state. One of the unfortunate results of this condition is the conflict of stockmen on the ranges. If the Eastern movement of sheep had been as great as the ranges of Oregon are prepared to furnish, very much, if not all of this unpleasantness on the ranges would have been avoided.

Pruning the Herds.
"One of the best features of the changed conditions of the stock industry in Oregon, is the pruning down of the vast herds, as a necessity in the diminishing range areas, and the improvement of breeds; preparing sheep and in fact all stock, in better condition for the markets, bringing a corresponding increase in profits and systematizing the business so it can be handled more satisfactorily to both grower and shipper. The small farmer who has settled upon the available foothill farms, with access to range, who takes care of small herds of sheep ranging from 100 to 1000, is building up the sheep industry, filling the vacant spots in Oregon opportunities and spends his money in the country adding to the market value of his flock and improving his farm.

A New Feature.
"A large movement of sheep has taken place in Oregon this year, that is entirely a new feature in the business. This a movement of Northeastern Oregon sheep into the San Francisco markets. I have in mind one firm that has shipped 100 car loads of sheep to this market from the extreme eastern portion of the state.

This has added a new impetus to the business in that section, as it was an unexpected opening. Southern Oregon, Nevada and California have heretofore supplied this market.

"Altogether Oregon has shipped out this year, in round numbers, 500,000 head of sheep. This is only half of what would have gone, had crop conditions in the Central states, where all of the feeding is done, not restricted the demand. Oregon lambs have topped the market in Chicago this fall, for this class of sheep. The total amount of sheep in the state is 4,250,000, on a conservative estimate.

Wool Market Good.

"The wool market has been very spirited and the wool has moved rapidly. The practice of making sealed bids for the wool clip, by the various buyers, have added a new feature to our wool markets. Purchasers keep the prices up, in their rivalry for the output.

"Just now the horse is taking a rest. The fall in the business occasioned by the close of the Spanish and Boer wars has affected the movement of horses. There have been shipped out of Oregon this year 250 carloads, the principal movement being to the Omaha and Kansas City markets.

Oregon Cattle.

"Oregon cattle have been sent into Montana, Dakota and Colorado during the early portion of the season. Later the beef shipments have been to this and Sound cities. The absence of packing houses and other permanent industries connected with the beef business, tends to cause Oregon cattle to be shipped out of the state. So far the shipments from the state, over the various lines, amount to 30,000 head, for this season, with the heavy feed yard shipments yet to go. There is no reason why the entire section of country tributary to the lines through the Inland Empire, should not find a market for its entire output in this city.

Recognition of the Hog.

"In all the progress of Oregon farming the most beneficial feature that has come to light, is the recognition of the hog, by the farmer, to be a source of profit. Mortgages are being lifted by the black pigs that follow the "Harvest King" and fatten upon the feed that has continually gone to waste in the great wheat fields.

"Over 700 car loads of hogs have been handled in Oregon this year, and the fall and early winter shipments will perhaps swell this number to 1000 car loads. Those shipped in the fore part of the season came to this city, and through here and Sound cities, to the Alaskan markets. The later shipments will go east as the number of hogs now ready for market in Oregon is far in excess of the demand.

Prosperity is General.

"In all branches prosperity prevails. The increasing number of the little red school houses throughout the interior counties and the cultivation of tillable land in a high degree of excellence, gives promise of much more in the future.

"As small farmers improve their breeds of stock and make a specialty of growing it for a certain purpose the better returns will it bring to all concerned. If mutton sheep are wanted, breed for mutton; if wool is wanted, make its growing a specialty; if you want driving horses, breed for them; if you want beef cattle, go to the ground floor to begin; any kind of a hog is still a hog. He is good the world over."

Twenty Millions for Theaters.

It is estimated that the American people paid $20,000,000 for its theatrical entertainment last season, and while it may be possible to estimate the amount spent in this way it is impossible to estimate the amount spent annually by those in search of health. Ocean voyages, change of climate and many other things are suggested, but even these often fail. The stomach is the foundation of good health. If yours is weak or disordered, and you suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness, nervousness or insomnia, you need Hostetter's Stomach Bitters at once. It is the best medicine in the world for restoring the stomach to its normal condition. Good health is sure to follow. Try it and be convinced. Avoid substitute, and imitations.

A Gymnasium.

Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, a meeting will be held at the Commercial Association rooms for the purpose of interesting the young men of this city in establishing a gymnasium in connection with the Commercial Association.

It is the plan of those who have the matter in hand, to double the membership of the association, establish a gymnasium, which is much needed in this city, and reduce the monthly dues so that membership will be within the reach of all.

Everyone interested in the matter is cordially invited to be present.

Remember—"Sunday at 4 p. m. at the Commercial Association rooms."

Halloween Dance.

The Halloween dance at Music Hall last night was one of the most successful events of the kind ever held in Pendleton. The hall was decorated with all kinds of imitations of pumpkins and yellow hangings and the dancing was simply grand. Other forms of amusement were indulged in and those present enjoyed the occasion immensely. Kirkman's orchestra furnished the music.
