FASHION'S PHASES

BAKER COUNTY OFFICERS AFTER THE EX-SHERIFF.

A. H. Huntington Now in Ohio. Will Be Brought Back to Face the Charges—Experts Examining Books. New York, Dec. 13.—Society just now is worshipping at the shrine of the debutante.

And shall we say that the debutante is paying homage to Dame Fashion? This might savor of spitefulness, but it is nearer the truth than to say she is worshipping at society's shrine.

From earliest childhood the young woman of wealth and fashion is drilled in the conventions of the world in which she moves; but all the training of a lifetime cannot instill into her that indescribable something which we inadequately call chic. It must either be inborn or she must hire someone to select her gowns to whom this talent has been given.

Pretty gowns is always a fascinating topic, but the modes this season are irresistibly alluring. There is so much individuality about them. And individuality is the keynote of fashion. The simplest bodice is smart only as it is distinctive and the energies of the modistes are concentrated toward originality in everything. One may run the entire gamut of dress materials and in the end find nothing more popular than the ever-adaptable chiffon. It is used exquisitely in a debutante frock with a rose pattern arranged in lengthwise stripes upon the skirt. The flowers are all full of pink-shaded silk, joined by spangled vines.

All over the rest of the surface of the chiffon, at not infrequent intervals are strewn clusters of rose and silver paillettes to represent dew drops. The sleeves are furnished with a ruffle at the elbow and the bodice is decorated elaborately with roses and spangles to match. Undersneath is worn a slip of palest pink satin, which, by the way, is growing more and more popular.

Debutante gowns while simple in effect are rich in material and the costliest trimmings ornament them. Wild roses, summer daisies in white and yellow and all sorts of unpretentious blooms are embroidered or hand-painted, with additional trimmings of silver or gold and lace that make the price of such a gown well high.

Yet many ambitious young women accomplish much of this work themselves. It is certainly an easy matter to select a simple white net and embroider it in any design that happens to strike the fancy. For the benefit of those who like variety it may be stated that flowers have by no means a monopoly upon fashionable schemes of decoration. Silver and gold tissue combined with satin and velvet are "bunched" into the similitude of grapes, cherries, currants and all sorts of fruits, while the unembroidered surface is spangled with sequins to correspond.

Plainer gowns are ornamented with lace, but usually two kinds are used to accomplish the fashionable effect. Irish and filet is a chic combination and especially pretty.

And, too, the effect is curious and it requires something like genius to do all of this. There are those who claim that dressmaking is an art rather than a trade. Surely there is none to dispute it, if we must judge by this season's fashions. Speaking further concerning the use of Irish and filet laces, motifs in these effects are cleverly joined with raised embroidery to give a peculiarly beautiful warmth of tone.

An ivory white coming-out frock shows this combination of laces joined with large rings of passementerie and fringes that sway with every movement of the figure. The skirt is of embossed cloth in the same ivory shade, the white being relieved with sable tails at the side of opening and a touch of nasturtium velvet at the throat and wrists.

Fashion's horn of plenty seems limitless. Almost every day brings some new vagary of trimming to view. The very latest device for imparting "fluffiness" to evening and reception gowns is a lovely new chiffon ruffling, which is edged with marabout. It is offered only in black and white, of the two colors combined, but they mingle well with light pink, blue and green and the neutral tints.

A fad which is rather an accessory than a detail of trimming comprises a set of handkerchiefs dyed to match each gown. The vogue has just arrived from Paris and is creating something of a furore in Gotham. Scarcely anything in the form of a hem or border is allowed in these handkerchiefs and if two shades of color go to make up a gown, it is the darker shade that present taste will select for the handkerchief. While nothing can be said in disparagement of the long coat, it must be admitted that the enveloping cape has returned with something of sudden favor. This cape is developed in pale tinted and white cloths and ornamented with more embroidery and heavy silk braids. The lining is usually of ermine or sable.

The prettiest of the piletots and Monte Carlo effects now show several caperits over the shoulders and sleeves that are more voluminous than ever. Unfortunately these two styles must be avoided by the woman of diminutive figure, because of the fact that they make for width.

Indeed what the short, stout sisterhood must wear this year is not of so much importance to her as what she should not wear, for finding what is becoming is a comfort in itself, since it can be worn without danger at any time. The many-caped wide-sleeved coats already referred to, are against her, then there are the hanging draperies from the hat which tend at once to shorten the neck and dwarf the figure. Aggravating this effect is the tulle bow, front or back, which seems little less than indispensable.

Hats for afternoon and evening made of fur and Irish lace are very smart. The lace is applied or rather imbedded in the fur in a very artistic manner, so that no other trimming is required. One is glad of this fact, too, when it is considered that these "extremely simple" chapereux range from $25 to $250 dollars.

Nothing in the list of approaching Yuletide gifts is more appropriate than a scarf or muff of fur, or both. If the donor wishes to be very generous. Some of the prettiest of the new squirrel scarfs and muffs have the skins sewn together in a slanting line that leaves a distinct ridge in the center of the garment and gives a richer lustre to the fur. It is to be especially noted that squirrel has been raised from the lowly estate of a lining this season to the most fashionable pelt of the year.

Other pretty scarfs are in Empire effects for draping the head and shoulders. They are in white, with small printed squares of the same color, set off by a narrow band of Persian at either side, rather a contrast to the gay arabesques used earlier in the season.

Ostrich, which, dear knows, have been costly enough all along, are displayed in a strikingly new guise. The quilts are highly polished and studied with imitation or real gems, as one can afford obviating the necessity of concealing them under the regulation rosette of lace or other material. Thus improved Fashion dictates that the plumes be draped across the crown of the hat so that the feathered and wave below the brim, while the gem-studded quill stands out in front, alone in its glory.

A million suffering women have found relief from Wine of Cardui.

WINE of CARDUI

There are many sickly women between the ages of 45 and 55, but there are very few invalids over 55 and 60 years of age. The change of life coming to a woman near her forty-fourth year, either makes her an invalid or gives her a new lease on life. Those who meet this change in ill health seldom live ten years afterward, while a woman who lays aside the active duties of womanhood in health seldom falls to live on in happiness, years after she has passed 60. This is truly a critical time.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1902
GENERAL NEWS.

England has ordered more first-class warships for sea in view of complications in Venezuela. This ice on the rails of New York's new "third rail" street car system has blocked traffic in that city very much of late.

Secretary Hay has explained to Dr. Haran, the minister from Colombia, that immediate action must be taken concerning the Panama canal. Poor cooking and untidy house-keeping was the underlying cause of the severing of martial bonds of 400 couples in Chicago last year, according to Ernest P. Hycknell, general superintendent of the Chicago bureau of charities.

Questions as to how it will be possible to enforce the payment of Great Britain's demands upon Venezuela without costly military operations and whether it would achieve desired results are being asked in England.

The secretary of the interior has sent to the house the draft of a bill to permit him to sell timber and other natural products from the forest reserves and for providing the granting of permits for the location of hotels, mills, etc., on these reserves.

PACIFIC NORTHWEST NEWS.

The jury in the Alkin murder trial at Hillsboro, failed to agree. Raspberries which ripened in December are on exhibition in Fairview, Or.

Mrs. H. H. Stone, a pioneer of Tillamook county, died at Ashland Friday of heart failure.

San Francisco physicians now say that the reported cases of bubonic plague in that city have proved to be nothing but chicken cholera, a harmless disease.

J. D. Hibbs who owns a large general merchandise store at Gaston, was held up and robbed of $50 and a check for $25, by two men, as he was closing his store Friday night.

An Eastern Oregon man will be elected president of the new Portland Board of Trade. A split has occurred in the board over irrigation. The two factions will each elect a set of officers.

H. A. Anderson, who was recently arrested on a charge of perjury, alleged to have been committed in the giving of testimony last summer while several homestead contest cases were being heard, has been given an examination before the United States commissioner and discharged and the complaint dismissed.

An Interesting Relic.
At the Weston bank the other day a few people who happened to be present were permitted to look upon a curious bit of paper money, so yellow and torn with age that its nature could scarcely be determined. It is a "shin plaster" of revolutionary times, and may have lined the pocket of some half-starved continental soldier at Valley Forge. On one side is the picture of a drum within a circle, and the inscription below, "Mind Your Own Business." On the reverse side appears a design of rings within rings, the date of February 17, 1776, and the words, "Printed by Hall & Sellers, Philadelphia." On both sides "One Third of a Dollar" appears, and there is an illegible signature scrawled in red ink. The relic belongs to Mrs. R. Reynolds, of this city, and has been in her possession for 20 years. It was presented by her mother, who in turn received it from her mother, and has thus been in the family for three generations.—Athena Press.

Saved at Grave's Brink.
"I know I would long ago have been in my grave," writes Mrs. S. H. Newsum, of Decatur, Ala., "if it had not been for Electric Bitters. For three years I suffered untold agony from the worst forms of indigestion, water-brash, stomach and bowel dyspepsia. But this excellent medicine did me a world of good. Since using it I can eat heartily and have gained 35 pounds." For indigestion, loss of appetite, stomach, liver and kidney troubles, Electric Bitters are a positive, guaranteed cure. Only 50 cents at Tallman & Co.'s drug store.
