HIGH PRICED FUEL

REVENUE STAMPS ARE USED TO WARM OFFICIALS.

Furnaces of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving Fed With Costly Material—$7,000,000 Worth of Cancelled Stamps burned in Two Months. Stamps that cost the United States government $1,000,000 have been burned for fuel in the furnaces of the bureau of engraving and printing, at Washington, D. C. For nearly a month the firemen at the bureau have been shovelling into the furnaces documentary revenue stamps at the rate of $40,000 daily. The stamps were burned with coal with satisfactory results.

It has been estimated that they have furnished fuel equivalent to a ton of coal a day and by using them for fuel the government has saved $150. These stamps were returned to the treasury upon the repeal of the war taxes.

They were dumped into the treasury by the ton. The fact that many of them were either printed on or affixed to bank checks, which also were burned in, increased the mass, which was carefully stored in the basement of the treasury.

The law requires that all stamps that have been redeemed be burned and these would have been destroyed in the usual way had not the chief of the printing bureau of engraving and printing suggested that they be used for fuel. The chief attributes his inspiration to the coal famine which has put the heads of all the government departments to their wits' end to keep their furnaces supplied with fuel.

An experiment showed that the stamps and checks with coal could be burned to the economy of the fuel supply and then every box and bale was dumped into the engine room of the bureau of printing and engraving.

An official of the treasury who usually is detailed to take charge of the destruction of defective stamps, kept tab on every consignment, and saw that its contents were destroyed. Defective stamps and those returned for redemption usually are burned in a furnace built especially for that purpose in the treasury basement.

In 1898, following the abolishment of the newspaper and periodical stamps, those outstanding were called in and there was a fire in the basement of the treasury every day for months.

The face value of the stamps destroyed was about $10,000,000.

Last winter the remainder of the beautiful Pan-American stamps were burned, the department, unfortunately, giving its pledge that all stamps remaining on hand after October 30 would be destroyed. Two months were occupied in burning these stamps. Their actual face value was about $7,000,000.

JOE ELL HAS NOT SOLD OUT.

Reported Sale of His Large Business in This City is Not Correct.

The Adams Advance publishes a touching farewell, a third of a column in length, to Joe Ell, of this city, in its issue of Dec. 26. The article pays Mr. Ell many high compliments as a private citizen, business man and as captain of Pendleton's volunteer fire department, which position he held for many years. It recounts his many splendid business qualities which have resulted in well merited success and in a tone that is intended to bring tears to the eyes of the marble angel in the tombstone warehouse, wishes him success whithersoever he goeth.

The report that Mr. Ell has sold out his harness and saddle business in this city is incorrect. He appreciates the neat obituaries which have already been written by several papers of the county, but desires to correct the report that he has gone out of business.

Pilot Rock Items.

Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Cottrell came out from Pendleton Wednesday to spend Christmas with Mrs. Cottrell's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Bietel.

William Ingram, of the firm of Demott & Co., Pendleton grocers, accompanied by his wife, attended the masquerade last night.

Miss Lottie Ogilvy, who is attending school in Pendleton, is home for the holidays.

M. F. Kelley, of the Golden Rule hotel, at Pendleton, passed through the Rock Monday afternoon on his way home from the Alba country where he had been looking after his ranch.—Pilot Rock Record.

Chief Rogers, of the department of education, reports that one of the most interesting exhibits of the University of Illinois at the World's fair will be a dynamometer car, an invention of the mechanical department of the University. The invention measures inequalities in track surface. A car now used by the Illinois Central railroad is to be exhibited at the exposition.

Over 700 carloads of hogs have been handled in Oregon this year and the fall and early winter shipments will perhaps swell this number to 1000 carloads.

"Mary, there's three months' dust in the drawing room!" "That isn't my fault, mum. You know I've only bin here a fortnight."—Puck.
