ABOUT VENEZUELA

WONDERFUL COUNTRY OF THE TROPIC CLIME.

Story of the Orinoco and its 1000 Tributaries — Matchless Forests — Short History of the People and Country — Small Area of Farm Land Cultivated.

The people of Venezuela are in the main descended from the Spaniards. A good deal of Indian blood has been mingled with the Spanish strain. They are a talented and courteous people who bear the reputation of being fine fighters. A considerable part of Venezuela is still practically unexplored and is inhabited by aborigines. The republic is divided into nine states, a federal district and five federal territories. There are 3900 miles of telegraph wire. Five steamship lines ply along the Venezuelan coasts and through the rivers. There are 234 miles of railroads. The monetary unit of the country is the bolivar, equal to 19 1/2 cents American money.

Chief City.

The chief city of Venezuela is the capital, Caracas. It has a population of 75,000 persons. The other chief cities are Valencia, 40,000 population; Maracaibo, 35,000; Barquisimeto, 32,000; and Ciudad Bolivar, 12,000.

In one of the fine public squares of Caracas is a large statue of George Washington.

History.

Venezuela remained under Spanish rule until 1811, when Simon Bolivar proclaimed her independent. The independence of Venezuela was recognized by Spain in 1845. In 1846 a series of civil wars began and did not cease until 1870. All slaves were emancipated in 1854. In 1864 a federal constitution was drawn up. Guzman Blanco became dictator in 1870 when he was elected president.

Wonderful Forests.

Of forest woods alone there were 145 varieties, including a fine specimen of the algarrobo, a beautiful wood of dark yellowish color, streaked with green veins. There were besides many specimens of prepared

Only Two Seasons.

There are but two seasons in Venezuela, the wet and the dry. When the sun reaches the Tropic of Capricorn the rains begin, and they do not stop until the sun has entered the Tropic of Cancer. Thus it is rainy and hot from April to October, and the rest of the year it is dry and cooler. During the summer the prevailing winds are from the northeast. There are heavy rain storms, called "northerners," usually in November and December.

One Thousand Rivers.

There are over 1000 rivers and brooks in Venezuela, of which over 400 are affluents of the Orinoco. The Orinoco is navigable 850 miles from the ocean, and taps the fertile regions in the interior of the Colombian republic. Some of the navigable tributaries of the Orinoco run south and join the Amazon or its tributaries, thus opening a double route to the sea. Besides this network of rivers, there are two large inland lakes, one of which, Lake Maracaibo, is as large as the Great Salt Lake in Utah, with an area of 2100 square miles. The other, Lake Valencia, is 1700 feet above the sea level.

Small Area Cultivated.

There are 13,600 square miles of agricultural land, of which only 300 square miles are under cultivation. The Orinoco sweeps over the arc of an immense circle, entering on the east coast and emerging from the country on the southwest border. There are over 70 islands on the coast, the largest Margarita, being 441 square miles in area. There are over 1800 miles of coast, scattered along which are 32 harbors and 50 bays. Like the great lakes of the United States, the two great inland lakes of Venezuela have their own ports. There are five gulfs on the ocean coast, the largest of which is the Gulf of Maracaibo, 1600 square miles in extent.

ATHLETIC MEET.

Prominent Amateurs Will Compete at the Madison Square Garden of New York.

New York, Dec. 27.—New Yorkers will receive an opportunity to see a host of prominent amateur athletes in competition at the first annual winter meeting of the Greater New York Athletic Association in Madison Square Garden tonight. The committee in charge of the games has catered to the popular fancy with a series of relay races in which the crack runners of Philadelphia, New York and other cities will be seen at their best.

Other events on the program are: Fifty yards, novice; 880-yard run, handicap; 60-yard run, handicap; 660-yard run, handicap; 300-yard run, handicap; one-mile run, handicap; three-mile run, scratch; running hop, step and jump, and a running high jump.

Arthur Duffey, A. H. Kent, Washington-Delgado, Pat Walsh and F. S. Edwards are the sprinters down to compete in the special scratch 60-yard. Duffey is the only man who has ever been credited with running 100 yards in 9 3/5 seconds. He hopes to break the present 60-yard record, 6 2/5 seconds, and has trained carefully with this object in view.
