REFORM SCHOOL

INTERESTING DESCRIPTION OF THIS INSTITUTION.

Productive Farm in Connection, Where Inmates Work—Boys Sentenced to the School Must Remain Until 21, Unless Paroled.

The New Year's edition of the Salem Statesman contains the following highly interesting article on the Oregon Reform School:

"The youngest of the purely state institutions for Oregon, all of which are located at Salem, is the Oregon State Reform School.

"The reform school is surrounded by about 600 acres of land belonging to the institution, and the administration buildings face the Southern Pacific railroad line about six miles south of Salem's business center.

"The Oregon State Reform School, though comparatively a very young institution, is as well organized and thoroughly equipped for carrying on the work as many similar institutions of greater age in Eastern states. The administration building is a handsome five-story structure of an attractive style of architecture, covering a ground space of 16,000 square feet, constructed entirely of brick, and is one of the best and most substantial buildings in the state.

Products of the Farm.

The farm lands, of which some 250 acres are under cultivation, are made to produce abundantly of the grain, potatoes, vegetables, etc., that are necessary for consumption at the school, and figure a very substantial saving in the cost of maintenance. There is a good orchard producing an abundance of fruit, and also a vineyard, while all other small fruits are extensively raised.

Primary Objects.

"The primary object of the school is to improve the general character and habits of the wards, and to fit them with a knowledge of some trade in which they be able to become independent and self supporting citizens. Hence the industrial department of the school is held to be very essential and second only to the scholastic training. This department affords training in following trades: tailoring, shoemaking, carpentering, cooking and baking, engineering, blacksmithing, painting, laundry work and farming. Each boy is required to spend four hours a day in the school room and an equal number of hours in the industrial department or in work on the farm, or in other capacities to which he may be detailed. The use of the library, studying music military drill, games, entertainments, etc., occupy the hours not devoted to study, work and sleep.

Inmates Remain Until Twenty-One.

"Regular hours for work, sleep, study, exercise and play, wholesome food, healthful, comfortable quarters and cleanliness in everything accounts for the very little sickness found at the school.

Sunday school is held Sunday mornings, and in the evening preaching service is held by visiting ministers. At each service the boys are required to attend.

"Boys are not sentenced to the school for a definite time. Upon commitment they become wards of the state until they are 21 years of age, and parents, relatives and guardians lose absolutely all control over them.

"While a boy may, on account of bad conduct, be kept at the school till he reaches the age of 21 years, yet by good behavior he may earn a parole. By good conduct the boy may earn one grade each month.

May Be Paroled.

"When 12 grades are earned he is entitled to parole. Thus by good conduct a boy may leave the school at the end of 12 full months, on a parole that requires him to report on the first of each month the first year and every three months thereafter. They are under the same general rules of conduct while on parole as while at the school, and for violation of the rules may be returned and started again in the lowest grade.

Large Attendance.

"The attendance at the school has been larger than usual. The average for the biennial term, up to September 1, was 131. At the date of this writing, a few weeks ago, the attendance was 123.

"The reform school is under the control of a board of trustees, consisting of the governor, secretary of state and superintendent of public instruction."

Japan's Coming Exposition.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 2.—The Japanese legation is in receipt of advice giving details of the rapid progress made in the preparations for the international exposition to be held next year in Osaka, the chief industrial city of Japan. The entire world has been invited to take part in the affair and from all accounts the chief countries of Europe, as well as of America, will be well represented. The exposition will present some novel and interesting features never witnessed on similar occasions in the past, to one of which in particular the imperial government desires to call the attention of the foreign manufacturers of the industrial public in general. That is the establishment of a special building for the samples of such articles produced or manufactured in foreign countries as may be of value for purposes of comparison or reference in the way of industrial improvement. The primary object aimed at is to afford the Japanese manufacturers an opportunity of studying the latest products of western invention with a view to the improvement of Japanese industries. At the same time this display of samples will offer to foreign manufacturers a rare opportunity for exploiting the rapidly developing markets of the whole far East, for the exposition is expected to attract thousands of visitors from the continental countries of Asia.

For a Week of Prayer.

New York, Jan. 2.—The American branch of the Evangelical Alliance of the World has completed preparations for the week of prayer, to begin tomorrow. The branch has decided to follow essentially the British program and has suggested to the churches the following subject for thought and prayer: Tomorrow is to be marked by sermons on the aspiration for a manifestation of the Divine outpouring and a consequent revival of the spiritual life of the people. The church militant, foreign missions, home missions, special work among the young in families and schools, nations and their rulers, and the ministry of the gospel by pastors, teachers and evangelists, are to be taken as topics in the order named, one for each evening of the week. The efforts to close on Sunday week with sermons on the speedy and certain answer to prayer and the injunction to be "sober and watch unto prayer," for the end of all things is at hand.
