WALLA WALLA PIONEER DEAD.

Thomas C. Moore, One of the Leading Citizens of That City, Succumbs to Operation.

Walla Walla, Jan. 6.—Thomas C. Moore, a leading citizen of Walla Walla county, died yesterday afternoon at St. Mary's hospital, following an operation for stomach trouble, which was performed last Friday morning. Mr. Moore, who had suffered from this complaint for several years, was taken seriously ill about 10 days ago and an operation was deemed necessary.

The funeral will occur from the Catholic church Wednesday morning at 8:30 o'clock.

The deceased was aged 54 years and leaves a widow and four children. Mr. Moore was born in Franklin county, near Fort Covington, New York, March 27, 1848. He resided there until about 16 years of age, receiving most of his education in the Fort Covington academy.

In 1864 he was seized with the desire to go west and finally landed in California of the same year, making the trip via the isthmus. He entered the employ of his brother who had preceded him, for a year, later drifting into the Nevada mining region where he made considerable money in mining stocks.

He finally ended his journeyings in Walla Walla in 1869, which he has made his home ever since, engaging in farming and stock raising. He was married to Miss Nellie Bannan at Bridgeport, California, in 1881, four children being the result of the union. Mrs. Moore died in 1897. In 1900 he was married to Miss Maggie Bannan, a sister of his former wife, who survives him.

LAMP TURNED OVER.

Caused a Fire Alarm to Be Turned in Last Night.

The turning over of a kerosene lamp in the old Coffee lodging house, on East Court street, caused a fire alarm to be turned in at 11:30 last night.

Little or no damage was done. When the lamp was turned over the oil ignited and it looked for a moment as though the house was going to go up in flames. One of the occupants of the house rushed to the central fire department and turned in the alarm.

O. R. FRANKLIN ARRESTED FOR SELLING INDIANS LIQUOR.

Gives Marshal Roberts the Slip and Makes a Dash for the Goal of Liberty—Intercepted and Downed by Roscoe S. Bryson.

Considerable fun was created on Main and Webb streets about 5 o'clock Monday evening by a fleeing man and an officer in close pursuit.

O. R. Franklin was arrested yesterday charged with selling liquor to Indians. While a trial of another man for selling liquor to Indians was going on Monday afternoon, Franklin entered the United States commissioner's office and remained a few minutes. When he stepped out one of the Indian witnesses followed him.

The Indian police remarked to Commissioner Halley that the Indian had a bottle of whiskey. Marshal Roberts was instructed to arrest the Indian. When searched, a part of a bottle of whiskey was discovered on him and the Indian said Franklin sold it to him. He stated further that Franklin had sold him several bottles recently. A warrant was made out for Franklin's arrest and placed in Marshal Robert's hands. The accused was arrested and placed under $500 bonds.

Made Dash for Liberty. Franklin told Marshal Roberts that he could furnish the bail and asked the marshal to let him go down the street to see a friend. The marshal accompanied Franklin, who turned into the Columbia saloon. While in there Franklin made an excuse to get to the front of the building and sprang out at the door. Then he made a dash up Main street to the corner of Webb, where he turned east.

Marshal Roberts discovered Franklin's break for liberty after he had almost reached the corner and gave chase. When Marshal Roberts reached the corner the fleeing fugitive was almost half a block ahead and Roberts yelled at him to stop or he would shoot. This had no effect on the offender other than to cause him to quicken his steps.

Bryson Takes a Hand. Roscoe S. Bryson was standing in the door of an office in the East Oregonian building when Franklin was fleeing up the opposite side of the street. He paid little attention to the man until the officer came in sight and commanded Franklin to stop.

Bryson, thinking the man was surely a badly wanted criminal, then took a hand in the chase. Franklin cut across the corner of Cottonwood street and entered the old corral, which has only two outlets, one facing Cottonwood street and one facing Webb street. The rest of the corral is boarded up and difficult for a man to get out except at one of the openings.

Bryson at once concluded that Franklin would attempt to come out of the corral on the other side from where he entered and made a rush for this opening to intercept him. His calculations were right and just as he got to this entrance Franklin came rushing out. Bryson made a dash at him and before the fleeing criminal knew what had happened he was lying on his face on the sidewalk.

Made Football Tackle. Bryson is an old football player and the knowledge gained in playing this game was brought to bear on Franklin. Bryson is a small man and Franklin is a six-footer and well built, but he could not resist falling when tackled around the knees by Bryson.

Bryson is now receiving much praise for the part he played in the affair although he is very modest in speaking of it. He says had he known that the man was only wanted for selling liquor to Indians, he would not have played the part in the capture that he did. When he saw the man running and an officer threatening to shoot he thought it was time for him to take a hand in the race, as it might be a daring criminal.

Franklin an Old Offender. Franklin has just finished a 90-day sentence for selling liquor to Indians. He is now in the county jail again, where he will be held a few days as he claims not to be ready for a preliminary before the United States commissioner.

Visiting in Pendleton. Clarence Crawford, son of T. H. Crawford, the prominent attorney of Union, is visiting in the city today with friends. A PIONEER RETIRES

JESSE FALLING DISPOSES OF HIS LARGE BUSINESS

In Pendleton a Quarter of a Century —Is Only Out-Ranked by R. Alexander—W. S. Byers, Also, One of the Oldest Firms.

Jesse Falling, one of the pioneer business men of Pendleton, has concluded to retire from the carpet, furniture, wall paper, sewing machine and undertaking business and has disposed of his stock to Baker & Fossum, to whom is also transferred the good will of his store.

Mr. Falling has been engaged in business here for the past 24 years and is with one exception the oldest merchant of our city. The exception is R. Alexander, who is the pioneer mercantile man of Pendleton and was conducting a dry goods and general merchandise business when Mr. Falling started.

With the removal from actual commercial life of Mr. Falling, one of the business landmarks of our city passes away. He and Mr. Alexander have witnessed the commercial development of Pendleton from a mere village to the present thriving and prosperous little city. Firms and various commercial enterprises have come and gone since they launched in business here, railroads have been built and rows of frame, unpretentious structures have vanished and in their places have sprung up modern brick structures, evidences of progress.

Another pioneer who has been continually in commercial life here longer than any other of our citizens is W. S. Byers, proprietor of the Pendleton Flour Mills.

The three ambitious young men cast their foundations with the village of Pendleton and each has prospered and stands high in the estimation of all our citizens.
