STUDIOUS BOOTBLACK.

Man Who Reads Shakespeare and Not Yellowbacks.

A colored bootblack and assistant around a barber very far from Main street, Clatsop, says the Union. The bootblack would not notice anything different in him from other bootblacks unless his eye was more keen. He brushed the coats up the nates and polished the shoes of the customers of that shop just like a score of bootblacks similarly employed.

Yellow bootblacks, this one might say almost any time when no one is demanding his attention he is reading. The fact that he had a book open before him is no comment, the average customer is up for a dime novel bootblack.
