Pirate Chief—Dead men tell no tales! Now, to bury the treasure!

A PICKLED CORPSE

TITLED ENGLISHMAN DEAD
TWO YEARS, YET UNBURIED.

Scion of a Noble House Shoots Himself—Relatives Refuse to Pay Burial Expenses—Embalmed Corpse Lying in Undertaker's Cellar, Fresh as a Daisy.

Although his heartless English relatives have now finally sent word from England that they will not pay for his burial, William Herbert, the pickled Englishman, who was embalmed more than two years ago, is in better condition now than when he died January 8, 1901. He is still tucked away in the cellar of a local undertaking establishment, and he is getting as hard as a rock, although he looks as fresh as though he just died yesterday. The pickling is all internal—William is not kept in brine—and when taken out of the cellar for inspection against moths or any other pests which are likely to bother a corpse, he shows up fine. So far, Herbert is the prize relic of the local embalmers. Even a skeptic would be compelled to admit that he is as staple an article as an ossified man.

Were the embalmers to shake up Herbert at the dead of night and ask him what he thought of the job of preserving him, even he would probably bow and say: "Gentlemen, from my own experience I can say that you are artists in this line of work. Here is my written recommendation. When the next stiff comes your way present it and say 'this is from one who knows!'"

In all likelihood Herbert would not be so affable if he were asked for his views as to why he is held, a pickled relic, in the undertaking shop; and he would probably be equally severe on his rich relatives in the old country, who, because of their thriftiness, have permitted him to thus remain in soak, instead of being taken out and buried like any other decent corpse.

Scion of Noble House.

The story of how Herbert came to end his career beyond this earthly existence in a Spokane undertaking shop is one of unusual romance and interest. The scion of a noble English family, having their ancestral possessions in and about 79 Witford road, Leicestershire, England, Herbert is believed to have been crossed in love in early manhood; and, in disgust at this affront by the fair lady, said tragically, "Rains mit her," or words to that effect. "I shall go to Spokane and fix clocks and play the piano for Andy Green, erstwhile a colored policeman, but now a landed baron owning his feudal palace near Natatorium park, where he entertains the gay set of that distant city."

Whether or not these are Herbert's exact words will never be known; but it is known he arrived in Spokane eight or 10 years ago. Fortwith he established his reputation as a tinker of Seth Thomas clocks and Waterbury watches, with the side accomplishment of being able to play the piano. He was a busy man from his arrival, was proud of his success, and of his family.

In 1900 he inherited £1600 ($8000) from the estate in England, collected the money, and it lasted him about seven months and 35 minutes. Then he went to the Metropolitan lodging house and tried to shoot himself to death.

Fiskey Barnett Butts in.
 Fiskey Barnett, now of Seattle, has always insisted that he was the first man to see Herbert after he shot himself, and pursuant to his request got prominent mention in the papers because of that fact. The attempt at self destruction, however, was unsatisfactory, and poor Herbert was taken to Medical Lake asylum, where he died, and from which place his body was brought to Spokane for interment.

Then began the trouble which resulted in the corpse being held up for lack of burial expenses. Herbert's rich relatives in the old country were cabled to and asked what to do with the body. The reply came back: "Bury him." Then a message was sent: "How much will you stand for the funeral?" "Not one penny," was the unsatisfactory response.

Then the police department took up the matter and tried to get the cost of Herbert's funeral. They also failed. After several communications a final response came from England in a letter which said: "We stated before that not one penny would come from us for the funeral. Do not write any more letters, because if you do we will not answer." In disgust the police ceased their labors.

At the undertakers it was said yesterday there were no plans for burying Herbert, and it was impossible to tell when such burial would take place. To them it seemed little difference whether or not the body is ever buried. Herbert is as good a relic as he would be in the ground.

Ohio Municipal League.

Dayton, O., Feb. 10.—Drawn together by a common desire to promote better municipal government, several hundred mayors, clerks and other officials of the leading cities of the state are gathered here in attendance on the sixth annual meeting of the League of Ohio Municipalities. The first session was held this afternoon when the visitors were formally welcomed by Mayor Snyder, to whose address response was made by Mayor Linkhart of Xenia. These formalities concluded, the convention took up the discussion of the new municipal code, which is to be the chief matter of consideration during the three days of the convention. The code will be discussed from every possible viewpoint, its application to villages, its relation to municipal economy and the effect it will have on the power of city councils and the various departments of municipal government.

Convention of Painters.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 10.—The whole United States and Canada as well, are represented at the annual convention of the International Association of Master Painters and Decorators, which began in Richmond today. The meeting will extend over four days, during which time numerous questions of interest to the craft will be discussed. A large and comprehensive exhibition of painters' supplies and materials is being held in conjunction with the meeting.

Pythians to Choose Headquarters.

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 10.—The board empowered by the supreme body of the Knights of Pythias to select a location for the new headquarters of the order is holding a meeting in Chicago today for a final discussion of the matter. Three cities—Indianapolis, Nashville and Janesville, Wis.—are bidding spiritedly for the headquarters and the choice will probably fall upon one of the three. Those best acquainted with the situation are of the opinion that Indianapolis has a slight lead in the race.

New Sayings of Mrs. Wiggs.
 "I've made it a practice to put all my worries down in the bottom of my heart, then set on the old lid and smile."
 "You never kin tell which way any pleasures is a' coming. Who ever would 'a' thought, when we aimed at the cemetery, that we'd land up at a first-class fire?"
 "I b'lieve in havin' a good time when you start out to have it. If you get knocked out of one plan, you want to git yerself another right quick, before yer sperrits has a chance to fall."
 "The way to git cheerful is to smile when you feel bad, to think about somebody else's headache when yer own is 'most bustin', to keep on believin' the sun is a-shinin' when the clouds is thick enough to cut."
 "Don't you go an' git sorry fer yerself. That's one thing I can't stand in nobody. There's always a lots of other folks you kin be sorry fer 'stid of yerself. Ain't you proud you ain't got a harelip? Why, that one thought is enough to keep me from ever gittin' 'sorry fer myself'—Century.

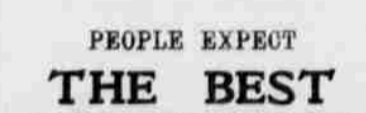

I never could understand why a woman puts anything on her face. She deceives no one but herself. Isn't that enough?—Life.
