MAZAMAS HAVE PLEASANT TRIP IN THE SNOW.

Return From Winter Outing—Three Adventurous Spirits Test Merits of Skis and Say the Norwegian Snow-shoes Are Next to Flying.

The Mazama Winter outing party which left Portland for Mount Hood on Saturday, February 7, returned to the city yesterday full of enthusiasm over the prospects of winter sports on the mountain, and unreserved in praises for the beauty and attractiveness of the scenery. They experienced no inconveniences from cold or weather and voted it one of the most delightful trips they have ever taken, says the Oregonian.

"We cannot express it in language," explained Colonel Hawkins, "neither can man ever hope to exactly reproduce that magnificent scenery. It is beyond description or imagination; it is simply the culmination of all that is beautiful and grand. I wish I could tell you the view we had when looking down the side of the grand old mountain, seeing the ribs and canyons showing the process of erosion; then looking up toward the top that appeared like one great mass of snow. Beautiful! It was even beyond all that the word means.

"There were only a few places that were not covered with snow. Here and there a vertical cliff was seen so steep that the snow could not cling to it, but the only level place on the side of the mountain uncovered was the little rock near the crater where the snow is melted by steam from the internal heat. The sun played in various colors upon the mass of snow and ice, adding a dazzling beauty to the view that was already the grandest I ever saw. All around us we could look down upon the country, the rough, jagged outline of the Cascades, that showed more forcibly in the coat of white snow.

"The object of the trip was to establish the fact that we have winter sports at our own door, and I will say that the capabilities of winter sports on Mount Hood are equal to those of any place in the world. Is that strong enough? I do not believe it is, but I cannot now express it any stronger, and no one can appreciate just how our party feels. We agree that in this regard the trip was more successful than our wildest hopes.

HIS PARLORS JAMMED.

The Great Palmist Doing a Land Of- fice Business.

Professor Wallace is apparently having a carnival of his own in his parlors at the Columbia hotel, No. 624 Main street. So many were the engagements made to see the celebrated enigma this week that he was obliged to refuse any more applications until he learned definitely just how long he could remain. He looks into your palms and tells you more about yourself than you yourself know.

He tells you what ails you and often times gives you back your health, your lost nerve, energy and power. He tells you whether or not you should make changes in your business matters, if you will be successful in your love affairs, if you will travel, if you will meet your obligations, and, in fact, he tells you the complete story of your life as told by the language of the hand. Prof. Wallace's stay is uncertain, but he is keeping the parlors open until 9 p. m., in order to accommodate the people. Yesterday he announced that he would give readings on Sunday from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m.

MAZAMAS HAVE PLEASANT TRIP IN THE SNOW.

Return From Winter Outing—Three Adventurous Spirits Test Merits of Skis and Say the Norwegian Snow-shoes Are Next to Flying.

This is the pioneer Winter outing of the Mazamas and I am sure we will bow have our regular winter trips, which I consider are even ahead of the summer outings, and in this regard I want to say something about the use of Skis. They are not difficult to manage and the sensation of gliding over the snow at a breakneck speed is beyond description. The only feeling I can think of that would furnish a good comparison is flying.

"Traveling with snowshoes is a drudgery, but skis are a perfect delight. Our skis worked admirably, and, for men who have had no previous experience, we got along finely, inasmuch as there was not a single mishap of any kind. We have demonstrated that people can easily become accustomed to the use of this mode of traveling over the snow; it only took us one day to get the combination so we could make good progress.

"Hardships? Why, no. Do I look as though I have been through many severe hardships?" and the Colonel looked up with a smile. "No, not in the least. We left Yocum's camp for the snow line, I in my shirt sleeves and the rest very thinly clad, and experienced no inconvenience from the cold. Why, while you people here were wearing your overcoats and probably had them buttoned up around your neck, we were pushing our way over the snow in our shirt sleeves. Talk about eating! We had all that a man could ask—fine, fresh trout and salmon, fresh meat and the finest kind of everything. We met two men who had been fishing, and they showed some fine salmon as the result. There is absolutely no reason why Portland cannot have winter sports as delightful as any other section of the world."

WONDERFUL CAREER OF THE DE MOSS FAMILY.

First Public Concert Given to Pay Toll on Blue Mountain Wagon Road—Official Song Writers of Columbian Exposition.

The De Moss family are the extract of a continuous line of musicians and entertainers dating back seven generations or more of Stewarts in Scotland, who have taken sacred song for their theme, says the Corvallis Times.

The father, the Rev. James De Moss a minister in the United Brethren church, early settled near Summer-ville in Union county. There among the pines he preached and sang the gospel in the little log school house in the custom of that time.

Salvation was as free as the air, so the minister supported his family for several years by driving ox-teams for the logging camps and the freight wagon.

The typical preacher of those days was a practical man, pious in the main—one who could don clerical attire on Sunday with the grace and dignity of a bishop, and during the week could drive the "patient ox" without the intertemperate use of strong Saxon. He performed marriage ceremonies, attended the infirm, officiated at funerals, and not infrequently ad-justed misunderstandings as arbiter between his neighbors.

One morning the pioneer minister awoke to learn that a large part of his neighborhood had been arrested for complicity in the LeBur-Wheeler stage robbery, and soon afterwards he learned that all the prisoners were convicted and sent to San Quentin. This ended his efforts at home building in that locality. So he moved to Cove.

Henry, George, Minnie and Lizzie, with two or three younger children, readily took to the organ, which was a rare instrument in Eastern Oregon where the piano was as yet practically unknown. The family were self-instructed. With neither money nor experience the parents and little ones as early as 1872 began a tour of sacred concerts. They commenced by touring the Walla Walla valley.

It is related that they did not have enough coin to pay toll at Meacham station, so they offered to give a concert.

Fred Foster, who was gatekeeper, soon organized himself into an audience, and sat on a stump up on the mountain height, while the performers stood on the spruce stumps before him and gave their first public performance. The story goes that the audience was so well pleased that he not only remitted their toll, but gave them a ten-dollar green back as a token of his appreciation.

This was their first concert money. The family, however, pushed on East, giving concerts on the way, until they finally arrived in Indiana, where they organized an academy of music. Afterwards Henry and George completed a course in the Royal Academy of England.

The family have sung in every town in the United States, and have toured Europe, singing "Sweet Oregon" in all the leading cities of that country. They were the official song writers of the Columbia exposition, the most popular of their compositions being "Sweet Oregon" and "My Little Home in Arkansas."

The latter song has been adopted as a state song in Arkansas and is taught in the public schools of that state. Thirty thousand copies of "Sweet Oregon" have been sold in this state. The family has also published several books and much sheet music, all of which has met with ready sale.

At De Moss Springs, of this state, they have a farm of 1200 acres, where the family spend the summer with the father who has long since retired from the concert business. There they have a music printing establishment, and it may be said that they practically own the little embryo town at that point.

At their home, where there are frequent visitors from all parts of America, the family have collected many curios, among which is the old Hank Monge stage coach which Mark Twain so humorously described as to make it historic.

Although the family began concert work 31 years ago, the character of their entertainments has steadily improved with the growth of the country. They have sung to all classes, and have won prominence by a fair share of talent and unremitting effort to please the popular taste.

Among their patrons are senators, barons and members of the royal family of England, but none have been more enthusiastic in their praise, and in turn more heartily appreciated by them, than the late president, William McKinley, whose acquaintance they formed in his Ohio home.
