Buyers of live beef state that no packing house beef is marketed nearer than the small tributary to Portland, Spokane, that nevertheless the fact that packing house beef is shipped into those areas is having considerable indirect influence upon the local beef market. Fruit in Fine Shape.

C. B. Darnell, of Freewater, who is interested in the raising of fruit, reports that there is no likelihood whatever that the fruit out there has been in the least injured by the freezes. On the contrary, all fruits are in the very best apparent condition with the exception that some trees are afflicted with scale. Blackberry canes, peach trees and strawberry plants are in especially fine condition. The scale is not severe nor widespread, and no alarm is felt about it. Immense quantities of nursery stock are being contracted for in that neighborhood.

A QUEEN CARPENTER.

The Girl Who Built the Famous Red Cottage.

On the sand dunes off San Francisco near Cliff House, stands a little red cottage that is entirely the work of two San Francisco society girls, says a visitor who recently returned from there.

Misses Joan and Wanda Hadenfelt, who live in a palatial home, decided that they wanted to try life by the seashore. They had an old street car moved down to the sand dunes, and without assistance transferred it into a cozy cottage. They added porches, kitchens, cornice, roofs and posts, and they painted the whole cottage a dark red. They built a fence around their little plot, and hung a front gate. Then Miss Joan stood on the roof of the front porch for three hours, lettering the sign "Water Wild" across the front of the cottage. With some difficulty the two girls knocked the seats out of the car and transformed the interior into an Oriental room. Miss Joan made the kitchen table, and Miss Wanda set up the sink.

The girls entertain at their new home and declare that they will live there all winter.
Miss Joan Hadenfelt was queen of the Mardi Gras festival in San Francisco a year ago. She is a brunette of magnificent proportions and is considered the most beautiful woman in California. She says carpentry is delightful.
