NEWS OF TUTUILLA

AL RAGAN BEGINS ON LARGE PLOWING CONTRACT.

W. H. Babb Returns From Canada. Where He Inspected the Great Stock Ranges of the North—Lecture on North Tutuilla—Spring Seeding in Progress.

Tutuilla, March 1.—William Gardner arrived at Tutuilla from his winter's vacation, on Friday.

M. H. Gillett, a former resident of Tutuilla, is here on a business trip from Moscow, Idaho, where he now resides.

John Krivette, sometimes known as "Frenchy," is over from Juniper on a visit. He recently sold some real estate in that section at a handsome advance on the purchase price of several years ago.

John Muir, of the firm of Muir Bros., was a Tutuilla visitor today. He has just finished seeding the Coyote plantation, consisting of about 700 acres which was partially seeded last fall. In addition to a variety of other products, he reports a promising crop of litigation just sprouting in his locality which promises a good harvest for the learned profession of the law in the near future.

George Ness was over from Cold Springs last week and invested in a $200 team of Pilot Rock horses.

Dos Turner is out from Pendleton, hauling his last barley crop, which has been cached away in a straw stack since last harvest.

Charles Foster was down from Gilliland on Friday rounding up his horses for market.

Al Ragan and William Connolly sent a plowing outfit up into Washington about six miles from Texas Ferry, where they have a job of plowing about 1,100 acres of sod, last week. One thousand one hundred acre tracts of bunch-grass land which is any good for grain raising are getting somewhat scarce. This particular tract has probably been passed over as "no account," a snap judgment which has been reversed quite frequently of late years.

W. H. Babb returned several weeks ago from a trip into the Canadian Northwest, which took him as far east as Winnipeg and into the north over the Crows Nest Pass railway into a land of fur coats, fur caps and good sleigh riding. The trip was an enjoyable one in every way. The vast areas of grass land, which still waits the first comer, as somebody has put it—

"Where the width of a world, unfenced, unowned, waits over the men who dar'e—looked very good to the eyes of a man accustomed to the crowded ranges of Butter Creek. Of course it is no good for farming. That is a necessary peculiarity of a stock country in the stockman's eyes, but W. H. visited one of these stock ranches, which is no good for farming, but where they had threshed the oats of 50 acres just for an experiment, and got 5,000 bushels, the finish of that stock country is visible to the naked eye.

North Tutuilla is fast becoming a valuable asset on the lists of lecture bureaus. A lecturer of no mean attainments from a neighboring city, arrived in that burg recently to deliver a lecture which had been duly announced and advertised for several weeks. He found a dark and chilly building which he proceeded to light up and wait for his audience, which slowly assembled to the number of a dozen. Patience and good temper are still on earth, and the lecturer returned at a later date and delivered the lecture.
