

Selling Out!

At Cost, and Less Than Cost

We intend remodeling both the interior and style of our store. These improvements will make it necessary to either sell or remove our stock. Rather than move our glassware, crockery and graniteware, we have decided to sell it at cost, and some lines less than cost. We will sacrifice other lines, also, as you will note by the following prices:

Granulated Beet Sugar per sack, $5.45
 Granulated Cane Sugar per sack, $5.70
 Mocha & Java Coffee per pound, 30c
 "400 Blend" Coffee per pound, 30c
 Mothers' Pride Coffee per pound, 20c

 (Note this Price.)

We will give no more premium tickets, and all out will be redeemed at 2c.

This is a bona fide Cost Sale. We ask those of you who are not familiar with our stock and prices, to come in and see.

OWL TEA HOUSE

A BIG LAND STEAL

LOCATING LAND IN SCRIP IN THE LAKEVIEW DISTRICT

Tract of 15,000 Acres Just Taken, and Another Deal for 30,000 Acres is Being Negotiated at Lakeview.

Lakeview, Or., March 14.—A stranger appeared here a few days ago and located 15,000 acres of yellow pine, with scrip. The tract is said to be on the north fork of the Deschutes, in Crook county. Cruisers and people holding claims have been in close consultation at the Lakeview hotel, in private rooms, and a 30,000-acre scrip deal is said to be brewing. The tract lies around the north edge of Klamath Indian reservation, and comprises practically all the timber in large blocks that is left in the Lakeview land district. May 1 will not find an available tract of timber land left in this district. Cruisers are now going on snowshoes and braving the greatest hardships to run out the lines.

Four newspapers are said to be on the road now to Silver Lake to get in on the ground floor and publish the final proof notices; but if it all goes with scrip, neither the newspaper man nor the settler will be much benefited.

Beds of black sand can be found throughout that timber belt, and before more entries are made the mineral character of the land may be determined.

GOLD COIN "SWEATERS" OPERATING IN NORTHWEST.

Headquarters in Sound Cities it is Thought—Secret Service Men at Work on Suspected Movements of Gang.

A clever gang of men known to the secret service agents as gold coin sweaters, is working in the Northwest. Its headquarters is not known, but it is believed that it is either at Portland, Seattle or Tacoma. The United States secret service agents throughout the territory are at work in an attempt to run the gang to earth.

The old-time counterfeiting business is very quiet just now, but the sweating process is being worked pretty strong. The manner in which the sweaters work is to put a gold coin through an electrical and acid bath, extracting from it $3 or $4 worth of gold leaving the face of the coin unmarred or defaced. In this manner the man who understands his business is able to make lots of money without much work.

Leaves No Trace. The clever sweater can put a gold coin through the process with such skill that no trace of damage can be seen by any but an expert. The secret service men say that they have no doubt that the gang now operating in the Northwest work over immense numbers of coins, and that they make a small living by it.

The process, the secret service men say, is by no means a new one. It has been worked for years, and is said to have been discovered by Chinamen.

Another trick of the man whose tendencies lie in the direction of making a living without work, is to place a number of gold coins in a leather bag and then rub them together until sufficient gold is rubbed off to make it worth while to sell it. The coins are not badly defaced by this process, and can be passed without trouble.

MAINE'S INCOME FROM TOURISTS

Game Warden Quimby Receives a Report Showing These Facts, and Points to Them as an Example of What Oregon Might do Along the Same Lines.

Game Warden Quimby recently received from the East a copy of the report of the commissioners of fish and game wardens of the state of Maine, showing the amount of money expended by the state for the preserving of game, and also the money brought into Maine through outside visitors, says the Telegram. Mr. Quimby uses this to illustrate his point that it would be wise for Oregon to appropriate sufficient money to hire deputy wardens to see that the laws are obeyed, as it would increase the game so that the people would come here to hunt.

The report shows some almost wonderful facts in regard to the amount of money that the game of Maine brings to the people through one channel or another. In part the report is as follows:

"Guides registered, 1801. They report having guided residents and non-residents as follows: Residents, 4124; resident hunters, 1609; non-resident 9199; non-resident hunters, 3252; total number of days guided, 78,171, at $3.50 per day, $274,598.

"From various sources it is reported that a total of 10,862 deer have been killed, and it is estimated that at least 20,000 deer were killed in the state of Maine in 1902.

"It is shown that the total number of non-residents coming to Maine for the year 1902 in the inland territory of the state was 133,885, with returns from two counties missing and incomplete returns from seven counties.

"They paid for board alone $1,371,201. Add to this $300,000 paid guides, and it makes a total of more than a million and two-thirds of dollars left by these people in the state for board and guides alone. It is believed that a most comprehensive estimate would be that these visitors leave at least $100 each on an average in the state. Indeed, some of them spend more than $50 a day.

"This shows what the income to a state will be from non-resident hunters and sportsmen," said Mr. Quimby in discussing the report, "and some day the people of Oregon will realize that their game interests should be preserved."
