What stronger breastplate than a heart untainted?
Thrice is he armed that hath his quarrel just;
And he but naked, though locked up in steel,
Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted.
—Shakespeare.

CIVIC PRIDE.

Pendleton is everywhere known as a prosperous and thriving town. It is the trade center of a large and rich section. Visitors and commercial travelers alike testify that it is a good business town. So far so good. But we cannot afford to rest on our laurels. Why should Pendleton not aspire to be known also as a beautiful town and a good home town. We have many expensive and beautiful residences here. What we need is more attention paid to our streets and yards.

The use of water for irrigation purposes should be encouraged in every way. Civic pride should be stimulated. Let our citizens take a pride in the appearance of their lawns. Put in a flower bed. Tear down the unsightly board fences between the residences and put in a light trellis for sweet peas. Plant a few choice varieties of roses and ornamental shrubs. Take care of them; it will do you good.

To stimulate endeavor along this line, let the city offer some inducement toward beautifying our city. For example, why would it not be a good plan to give a prize of $50 for the neatest and best cared-for front yard or lawn; a second prize of $25, and to the five next best, free use of the water for irrigation during the season. This would result in beautifying the city and would be well worth the expense.

The example of those who took pride in the appearance of their surroundings would prove contagious and others would fall into line. The expense incurred would be trifling as the honor of taking a prize would be sufficient inducement to our public-spirited citizens to use sufficient additional water in keeping their lawns and gardens beautiful to more than meet the cost of the prizes offered. Let us take a pride in the appearance of our city and take advantage of this beautiful spring weather to fix up our lawns and gardens.

TOO MUCH PUBLICITY.

The public will be heartily glad when the Burdick-Pennell case is ended and drags its slimy tail out of the public gaze. It is bad enough that frail humanity should prove recreant to sacred marriage vows and trail their honor in the dust, but it adds no honor to the shameful record of man's duplicity and woman's weakness to have the details of their fall from virtue's narrow way blazoned forth for public delectation. What that old Roman satirist, Juvenal, said 1800 years ago still holds good: "That there's a lust in man no charm can tame
Of loudly publishing our neighbor's shame;
On eagle's wings immortal scandals fly,
While virtue's actions are but born to die."

A DARK BLOT ON A BRILLIANT RECORD.

Sir Hector MacDonald after a brilliant career in which he rose from the inconspicuous position of a private in the British army, to that of general, has died by his own hand in a Paris hotel. He preferred death to a public exposure of his dishonor. It is the old story of unbridled passions. Truly he that ruleth his spirit is greater than he that taketh a city. MacDonald undoubtedly possessed courage of a high order. He was a brave and gallant officer and one much loved by his men. If he could have but ruled himself with the same iron hand that he did his men; if he could have subdued his own nature and desires as he did his country's foes, his name would have gone down to posterity with honor. Poor MacDonald, one can not help regret the dark blot on an otherwise clean record. Aside from this his career has been an exceptionally brilliant one.

His great chance came when as a sergeant during the Afghan campaign in 1879 and 1880, with a small force he, by a furious bayonet charge, cleared out a body of Afghans who were lying in ambush for Lord Roberts. For this feat Lord Roberts offered him the choice of the Victorian cross or a commission. He chose the latter. His greatest military achievement was leading the Black Soudanese brigade in the Omdurman campaign against the Khalifa. On his return from Omdurman, King Edward, then Prince of Wales, when greeting him, said:

"In 1887 you were doing subaltern service in India, and now you are general in the British army. I am proud to have met you."

AN ANTI-CIGARETTE CRUSADE.

Spokane is waging an anti-cigarette crusade. The schools of that city have taken the matter up in earnest. It is no longer a matter of mere sentiment. Business men, railroad companies and other employers of labor are discriminating against the cigarette fiend. He is not so alert nor has he the stamina of the boy whose senses have not been dulled by the insidious poison inhaled with the smoke of the cigarette. Besides injuring the physical well-being of a growing boy, it blunts his finer sensibilities. No better proof of this statement is needed than the fact that a boy, otherwise thoughtful and well-bred, will smoke where the fumes may be offensive to others. It breeds discourtesy and selfishness. He holds his own pleasure above the comfort and feelings of others.

THEY ALL WANT OUR LUMBER.

A realization of the demand for Oregon lumber may be had by reading over the list of vessels now loading in Portland with lumber for foreign ports. The Crown of India is loading lumber for South Africa; the Peru for Liverpool; the Cockermouth for Peru; the Norman Isles for Siberia, and the Pak Ling for the Philippine Islands. Almost daily carload after carload of plies and heavy timbers pass through this city for Salt Lake, where 36 miles of piling is being done along the shores of the great Salt Lake. Oregon's lumber carries the name of this state to the four quarters of the world.

BIG AND LITTLE FISHES.

Today's dispatches announce that the United States Steel Trust has just purchased another plant at a cost of $80,000,000. Scarcely a day passes but what some deal involving millions is reported. Shakespeare makes one of his characters say: "Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea.
Why as men do a land, the great ones eat up the little ones."
With the constant consolidation going on, the little fishes are getting pretty well cleaned out.

The appointment of E. E. Clark grand chief of the Order of Railway Conductors to be assistant secretary of the department of commerce is a good appointment.

CIVIL SERVICE RULES EXTENDED

On April 1st, under a revision of the civil service rules a considerable number of places heretofore excepted from examination will be included

proved by thousands of sufferers to be unequalled for dispelling disorders of the stomach and liver, is within the classified lists. The more strictly civil service is enforced in spirit as well as to the letter, the better will be the public service.

Beecham's Pills

Sold Everywhere. In boxes 10c. and 25c.

When a man's fitness for the place is made the basis for appointment instead of his political services the public gets good service. The public is not at all interested whether John Smith, railway mail clerk, is an active political worker so long as he works his mail quickly and cases it accurately. It cares little or nothing for the exact complexion of his political belief.

What they do want, however, is that having attained accuracy and speed by experience he should be retained during good behavior and not supplanted by someone having less efficiency, but more pull.

While the extension of civil service is a move in the right direction and a condition to be rejoiced at, yet there are some minor faults in the system which should be corrected. Chief among the faults is the protection and retention of incapable or unfit men already in the service. There should be some effective system for weeding out the dead timber from the lists. Once in the service they may act in a very arbitrary and insolent manner to the public whose servants they are; they may do a great many little things, and subject the public to many petty annoyances, discomforts and inconveniences, without subjecting themselves to the danger of removal. Fortunately such overbearing and officious characters in the public service are comparatively rare. There should be a way of ridding the service of one whose dealings are constantly with the public and who is totally unacquainted with courtesy, accommodation or good breeding.

THE FIERCE FIRE OF PROGRESS.

It is not new, this spirit. It is as old as the human race. Recent discoveries show that it reared civilization upon the alluvial plains of Asia thousands of years before Christ.

Young races—we are the real ancients—imbued by this impulsive rearing of mighty temples and palaces whose ruins are disclosed hidden by mounds—mere hills to the nomad Arabs, seneschals of great cities of the savants.

But the rulers of Nippur who felt the fire of progress and built wondrously aeons ago reared their works with the whip-lash stinging the backs of slaves.

History repeats itself, and so today the secret of America's greatness is also the secret of many evils.

The fire of progress hurts, burns, destroys many.

But, thank God, the spirit that demands the finest railway station also cries for the best hospitals. It urges men to amass colossal fortunes, and also demands that if there shall be democracy it must be real democracy.

It ruthlessly crushes those in its way, and it also confronts its own manifestations with threatening hand and demands that progress shall not be cemented with suffering and sweat, but by the cohesion of justice.

The fire to excel, the passion for the best, applies to art as well as trade; to legislation as well as manufacture; to shining purity as well as mere wealth.

The hope of the world lies in majestic growth of theories of betterment, as New York is always being torn down and rebuilt. The world's hope is the striving for good with the standard set high up and ever, ever higher than the present.

Consumption's Small Beginning

No matter how strong you imagine yourself to be, if you are not breathing plenty of good air every day, if you are over-working, keeping late hours, or in any way using up your energies faster than they are repaired, you are making it easier for consumption to come into your lungs. This is the small beginning.

Let your own good sense and your doctor prescribe your habits and the necessary medicine. For nourishment nothing will do you more good than Scott's Emulsion. It contains elements which you cannot get from ordinary food and is rich in the best materials for making good blood.

Scott's Emulsion is a wonderful food; it furnishes a great deal of nourishment though you take so little of it. That little enables the body to overcome wasting and to build up the run-down and worn-out tissues. Moreover Scott's Emulsion is a great flesh-builder, and when the consumptive can gain flesh he is getting the upper hand.

We'll send you a sample free upon request.
