"KEY TO SUCCESS."

Determination, Persistence and Cour-age Will Bring Success, But Not Without Opportunity,

Mr. Cleveland's "key to success has been discussed by our corres pondents from various points of view, but the most essential factor seems to have been overlooked both by the philosopher and by his critics. Whether "determination, persistence and courage" can be taught or not. is it possible for them to bring success without opportunity?

Suppose you have determination, persistence and courage, but at the critical time you do not happen to be in a position to launch upon that "tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to for-tune," and so find yourself forever floundering in the shallows? What would have been the career of Mr. Cleveland himself if a quarter of a century ago he had happend to be living in Philadelphia instead of in Buffalo? His determination, persistence and courage would have given him a fair living as a lawyer, no doubt, they would not have swept him from the office of a reform mayor through the governorship of New York to the presidency of the United States. What would be the outlook for a Patrick Henry in Russia, or for a re publican statesman in Georgia!

Cromwell remained a simple, unknown country gentleman until he was 43 years old, and beyond doubt he would have stayed in the same po-sition until the end of his days if he had not been living at the fortunate time when it pleased destiny to set the crown of England on his head. Had Napoleon lived under Louis XIV he would never have become the ruler of Europe. The most he could have hoped would have been to be a Tu-renne, and not improbably he might have died a half-pay major of artillery

At the close of the Mexican war the military career seemed to offer so little to Grant that he resigned his commission. He knew nothing of business or politics, and at the age of 39 his life was an utter failure. He never would have been heard of but for the accidental arrival of a great war just when his latent military capacity was at its maturity. And Lincoln—what would he have been but for the overshadowing moral issue of slavery? A smart country lawyer and politician—possibly a senator from Illinois-but never the object of a nation's gratitude and hero-worship.

The man who has within himself the creative faculty—the poet, the painter or the sculptor—may be in a measure independent of opportunity, although even in such cases we poetic authority for the that the "mute, inglorious Miltons' outnumber those of the articulate va riety. But the man who has to deal with outside forces—the soldier, the politician, the engineer or the busi-ness man-is seriously handicapped if those forces happen to be working the wrong way. The path to fame, to the wrong way. The path to fame, to wealth, to power, or to any great success, oftenest leads from the door of opportunity.-New York World.

SHEEP AT ECHO.

Rev. Sunderman Reports Stock in Fine Condition.

A. H. Sunderman reports his own and everybody else's sheep in fine condition, speaking of the Echo neighborhood and contiguous territory especially. Mr. Sunderman states that nearly all the 4,000 head of cattle which were wintered for beef around Echo have been sold off. Mr. Sunderman has made a study of the cattle question in this county and has become convinced that the very best all-around animal is the shorthorn graded high—say at least three-fourths grade, or not less than a half. He avers that more high-grade shorthorn will yield an average of more than 4 per cent butter fat than any other breed except the Jersey, which is, of course, disqualified because it cannot be disposed of for beef to good advantage when its term of ser-vice as a milk animal is ended.
