WEEKLY FASHION LETTER.

New York, April 4.—The Easter fashion parade this year will not be the carnival of color that has marked previous processions; while there will be a beautiful variety of tints among the gowns worn Easter Sunday, colors will not run riot. Harmony is the keynote of the season's modes, and the arbiters of fashion have perfected their plans so thoroughly that all the contrasting shades may be blended into an exquisite ensemble if need be.

Violet has been superseded by grey and tan, yet it combines effectively with both. It is more fashion, however, to associate odd colors with lace in the trimming of the gown. It is observed in many of the most elegant toilettes that the laces which adorn them have their patterns traced with narrow thread-like bands of silk which are embroidered in silver, gold or steel beads or embellished with French knots. The latter are less expensive and always fashionable.

For Afternoon Wear.

A gown in which this idea is beautifully carried out is designed for afternoon wear. The skirt is shirred in several rows at intervals of about nine inches from the belt to the knees. At this point the fullness flares into a graceful sweep all around the figure, but the train is not very decided.

From the bust line to the belt the bodice is laid in graceful folds that suggest a cross between tucks and plaits. The yoke, which is of yak lace is threaded with narrow strips of mauve satin embroidered in cut steel beads. The collar is cut in one piece with the yoke which is finished with four elongated tabs with hem-stitched edges. These tabs fall over the blouse front of the bodice and are made of grey taffeta. In addition to the hemstitching, they are appliqued with medallions of beaded lace.

The sleeves are tucked at the shoulders and above the lace cuffs and the space intervening above and below the elbow is encrusted with an applique of lace. The effect of the gown is stunningly set off by a spreading hat of grey French chip trimmed with the same color plumes and satin violets.

Gown of Violet Crepe.

A gown of palest violet crepe de chine which would be apt to prove trying to any save a perfect complexion, has much originality of detail, yet withal is extremely simple. This skirt is also shirred. In fact, the tendency is to eliminate the straight lines which are the delight of the woman inclined towards obesity. In this particular instance, however, the shirring is confined to the front width, while the remaining gores of the skirt are appliques of Persian embroidery, alternating with bands of the crepe de chine. White violet and the palest blue constitute the color scheme of the applique.

The waist has a bolero front shirred into the shoulders and cut perfectly round. Finishing the edges of the bolero is a lace edging with the scallops embroidered in violet silk. The collar is composed of satin bands and lace with a final edge of white chiffon.

Little capelets to match the boleroed front fall over the sleeves at the shoulder. Above the cuff the puff opens and shows an undercuff of chiffon with which the embroidery which finishes the opening combines very daintily.

Figured chiffon is among the new fabrics for Easter, though it will be limited to gowns intended for Easter week balls and receptions. It is too delicate and inappropriate for street wear. Later on, however, it would make a delightful summer frock.

Dresden Effects.

The Dresden effects in this new chiffon, are especially chic. An evening gown with old rose and pale green patterned on a background of green, has the skirt in three tiers, each flounce edged with crystal trimming and gauged around the hips.

The bodice is prettily gauged in V-shaped divisions over which is worn a bolero of lace threaded with old rose panne worked with crystals and corals. The waistband is of pale rose velvet.

So many of the smart gowns this season are trimmed with garlands of flowers made of satin ribbon. The flowers are almost perfect in their imitation, but there is art in the arrangement of the blooms that every dressmaker does not command and in the designs exhibited in the swell shops the hand of the grande faiseuse is recognized.

There was never a time when the uses of ribbon were greater and more varied than now. In no detail of dress does it find more subtle expression than in sashes. One of Dame Fashion's whims just now is to start the sash at the shoulders and left it fall over the skirt, heading it with natty Alsation or other perky bows. Another pretty arrangement of the sash is to have it depended from a close-fitting girdle and alternately shirred and tied in careless knots from the belt to the hem of the skirt.

Persian and Dresden ribbons make very dainty and effective sashes, but following the craze for elaboration, many imported costumes have sashes trimmed with ruches of chiffon or embroidered in exquisitely delicate designs.

Liberty Satin Frocks.

There is a great demand for soft liberty satin frocks just now. White and the pastel tints are chosen for afternoon, evening and house wear, but the delft blues, resedas, light peach, cornflower blue and pe venche tints are charming for street wear. Many of these gowns are trimmed with black and gold, an influence which is said to have come to us from the recent Durbar in India. For the woman who must needs include a black gown in her wardrobe nothing could be handsomer than a black Chantilly mounted upon gold tissue, with a tiny edge of gold on all the lace flounces and frills.

"Saved My Life."

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me when all else had failed. I suffered a long time with female troubles."

"Mrs. Pinkham's advice and medicine saved me from a surgical operation. Doctors said an operation was necessary."

Thousands upon thousands of women throughout this country are not only expressing such sentiments as the above to their friends, but are writing letters of gratitude containing just such expressions to Mrs. Pinkham until she has more than a million from women in all classes of society who have been restored to health by her advice and medicine after all other means had failed.

Women should remember that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is performing such remarkable cures, assisted by Mrs. Pinkham's advice.

If you are asked by a druggist to take something else, demand the medicine which you know is best—the medicine which has made the greatest number of cures—the medicine whose record is unequalled by any other medicine, exclusively for women, in the world,
