A Growing Industry.
W. Mumford, one of the large strawberry growers of Freewater, is the city. He reports the strawberry crop in the vicinity of Milton Freewater as giving unusual promise of a large crop. He is trying to secure labor to harvest the crop. His idea is to have families go and camp out during the season, which lasts about six weeks. Women and children will find in addition to being a pleasant thing it will be a profitable one as the little tots can pick a few during the day. In the Willamette valley thousands of families each spend a few weeks in the hope that the children earn enough to their schoolbooks and shoes and a little left over for Christmas presents. While their mothers are to indulge in many a little luxury they might not otherwise feel could afford. But aside from the social considerations, it proves a useful and pleasant outing. There is a reason why the Umatilla county strawberry industry should not be one of our large industries bringing into the county lots of money now going to other strawberry growing sections. The industry is one of encouragement.
