YESTERDAY'S GAMES Walla Walla 4, Dayton 7. Pendleton 19, STANDING OF CLUBS.

Pl'yd Won Lost P. C. Imyton

Yesterday Pendieton had a holiday game, and it was a holiday game in every respect for the local team. It was slow and it was easy and it as certain and sure that the touched the supper time before sun touched the supper time before the last out was made. At no time did the lads in the cardinal suits with the crepe trimmed Colfax on their manly breasts, have more than a hazy look in at the score board, and at no time could they reach the crown of victors with anything learning the country with anything learning the cardinal suits with the of victory with anything less than a long, long measuring rod .

Colfax put on nine new crimson suits, and by the same token a hoodoo vast and clinging. Before the end the Indian boys in dingy grey had rolled them in the dust and brushed the pollen from their wings.

To the tune of the band West grab-bed the willow and waved it in the air. Marcus, Pendleton's south addition man, took just three shots at the gentleman from the other side of the campas, and each time the man the flaming suit made a pretty swing. After three of them he sat down to rest. Two of his companions did likewise and then the local boys tried their luck.

Rupel was behind the gun for the Colfax boys and the first shot he fired clipped the plate. For a time his aim was good, and then something went wrong with his sights and be threw any old place.

The game all through was a ragged one, and errors piled up so fast that the scorer had to use shorthand to keep track of the credit side of the ledger, Part of the errors were caused, no doubt, by the rough infield but most of them were rank and inexcusable.

Two-base hits were the feature of the day and not the exception, and double plays were numerous. Everybody could steal a base if they want-ed one, and quite a few of them wanted an extra bag or two.

Gass, the new Pendleton man, cultivated things out in the center garden, and raised quite a crop. He made the sensational stop of the game, when he made his athletic stop of a long fly in the first half of the sixth inning, after running a long distance, catching the ball at his insteps, falling, and yet holding his
