HER HANDS MASHED

DISTRESSING ACCIDENT IN NEW STEAM LAUNDRY.

Mrs. A. H. Finch's Hands Caught in a Steam Mangle Yesterday Afternoon—Suffering Woman Taken to the Hospital.

A most distressing accident occurred at the new steam laundry yesterday afternoon, in which Mrs. A. H. Finch, the wife of the foreman, lost, in all probability, part of her right hand and cruelly mashed the other from the tips of the fingers to the wrist.

The new mangle for the laundry had just been started for its trial run, and Mrs. Finch was watching it, in company with her husband and several employes. She was standing by the roller with her gloves on, ready to take her departure, and reached out to touch the big steam-heated cylinder. In some manner her right hand became caught between the rollers and was drawn into the machine. In trying to save herself she thrust her left hand against the roller, and it, also, was drawn between the revolving cylinders. Her husband quickly tried to stop the machine, but not until the engineer turned off the power was he able to release his wife from her awful position.

The rollers are steam heated and set close together for the ironing of all kinds of large articles, such as table cloths, sheets, towels and things of that sort. The machine had to be run backward till the lady's hands were released by the rollers before she could be taken from the place.

Dr. C. J. Smith was called and the suffering woman was taken to St. Anthony's hospital, where her hands were temporarily dressed, and she was made as comfortable as possible.

This morning a more extended examination of her injuries was made, and the physician reports that while there is a possibility of saving both hands, it is very probable that three fingers from her right hand will have to be amputated, together with a portion of her hand. The left hand can be saved and will heal in due time without any evil results.

Mrs. Finch displayed wonderful nerve, standing at the mangle with her hands imprisoned between the red-hot cylinders without cries or fainting. Had she fainted and fallen against the machine she would probably have lost her arms.

The lady is resting as well as could be expected, and suffers no undue pain from her accident. It is hoped she will be around as soon as the shock incident to the injury has worn off, and that in time she will recover with the use of both her hands.

CATTLE FOR SEATTLE.

One Buyer Goes to California for the Sound Market.

J. C. Lonergan, the cattle man, has gone to California where he will buy for the Frye-Bruhn Company, of Seattle. The scarcity of cattle in this part of the country is driving the dealers to the south, where they can draw from the Texas and Mexican ranges. Mr. Lonergan may go on farther south if the stock in the California markets is too dear or too scarce.

It is stated that the large dealers can buy and ship cheaper from the southern market than from the Oregon and Montana districts, under the present prices and scarcity of stock.

J. O. MACK DEAD.

Formerly in Business in This City—Well Known Throughout Northwest.

J. O. Mack, who ran a bowling alley eight years ago under Frazer's opera house in this city, died in The Dalles yesterday of pneumonia.

He was in the employ of Van Scyver & Son, of Portland at the time of his death. He was sick for two weeks in Spokane, but recovered sufficiently to continue work. On reaching Portland last Thursday he suffered a relapse, and was taken to his home in The Dalles.

At first it was thought he had a slight attack of grip, but it suddenly developed into pneumonia and after three days' illness at home, he died. Since leaving Pendleton Mr. Mack has made his home at The Dalles, although his work as commercial traveler covered the entire Northwest. He leaves a wife and one daughter.
