Pendleton's pets landed on the Scots yesterday to the tune of 5 to 1, but it took the Indians 14 innings again to accomplish it, says the Union. For two days running Walla Walla fans have been treated to baseball par excellence. Twice has Pendleton won, but each time the scorer had to double up five innings to make it a game. Both were great games, and, while Walla Walla did not have the satisfaction of winning either, the Scots made the young men from the reservation line know they had had a tussle before it was over.

The first eight innings of the game did not develop much enthusiasm. It was artistic baseball as she should be played, but there was nothing of a very sensational nature. In the second a nice double play from Dean to Fisher to Buchet retired Brown and Klunkhammer from further participation that inning. In the third Hogan made a fine catch of a long fly from Dunn's bat, but Brown hit safe and brought in Wilkins.

In the fifth Buchet distinguished himself by a fine catch of a hard drive. When Walla Walla came to the bat things looked mighty good. Hogan hit safe, Buchet flew out and Dean got his base on balls, but Bradley did not smash the sphere hard enough and there was "nothin' doing."

In the ninth Dunn was in good shape to get to third base, but he was too slow and the Scots got him between the firing lines. He dodged and ducked, ran backwards and forwards, and finally Berry ran him down. Then Hogan caught another long fly and retired the side. The score was still 1 to 1.

Pendleton gave promise of scoring a run in the 12th inning, but "Slats" Taylor was not quite fast enough on his feet and he was caught within a foot of the home plate, just in time to retire the side.

Daviscourt went out on a fly to Berry. Walla Walla got no more runs and it was all over.
