LIVESTOCK IN GOOD CONDITION

C. J. Mills Aply Reviews the Situation Now Confronting Eastern Oregon.

SAYS TO CUT DOWN HERDS AND FEED MORE STOCK.

Large Holdings Are Suicidal in Present Range Conditions—Profits Are Lessened by Shipping an Unfinished Product.

C. J. Mills, livestock agent of the O. R. & N., is in the city today on an extended trip throughout Eastern Oregon and Washington, in the interest of his busy department.

While the grass was slow in starting in many portions of the range district, the stock conditions, in general, were never better than at the present time, so far as feed and the progress of spring work is concerned.

Stock Movement Brisk.

The movement of range sheep and cattle to Montana and other range districts has started off with the usual activity, but I find among all our stockmen that suicidal tendency to hold on to more stock than the ranges will support. This is a suicidal policy.

Recognize the Vital Meaning of Preparing Stuff for Market.

The farmers are slowly coming to recognize the vital meaning of preparing stuff for market. As an index to the growth of this tendency, it is worthy of notice that the O. R. & N. handled 100 per cent more hogs during the past year than the year before.

Big Herds Doomed.

The big herd must surrender its prestige and place to the well-kept, little herd. The poor calf and the poor lamb now shipped out of the state to be fed and marketed by the middle man elsewhere must be prepared for market in Eastern Oregon, feed yards and sent direct from here to Portland and Puget Sound.

Mr. Mills leaves tonight for Washouqua, Wash., to look over the stock interests in that vicinity and will attend the meeting of the Wallowa County Woolgrowers' Association to be held in Joseph on May 26.
