THE WOOL MARKET BRIGGSON ITEMS

BUYERS AND GROWERS
SPARRING FOR POINTS.

Three Quarters of a Million Pounds Now Stored in Pendleton—Montana Losses Give Sheepmen Hopes for Higher Prices.

The wool market at the present time resembles the great American game of poker, at least from the grower's side. Every man who has wool thinks his wool is worth as much or more than the other fellow's. The sales at Arlington yesterday were a farce so far as any movement of wool was concerned, according to reports from there. The buyers are scaling from 10 to 13 cents and this figure the growers refuse to accept.

Several small sales of special grade were made in the Arlington country prior to the sales, for 15 cents, and the growers took the cue and held for higher prices when the warehouses opened with the pools. The buyers refuse to pay the price asked and the wool is still in pool.

There will be about 750,000 of wool in storage for the sales at this place on Thursday and Friday next. The buyers are independent in their attitude and claim that the growers will not hold out longer than the second sales or if they do will yield at last in private sale, to the terms offered them. Whether or not this will be true remains to be seen.

The sheepmen know the ravages of the recent storm in Montana and can guess something of the consequences on the price of wool. They realize that the loss of a million or more sheep from the Western market means much to the aggregate output of wool and will hold for the market to raise.

The wool quotations have been strong and with conditions prevailing since the storm they hope for a still stronger upward tendency, so the growers say.

On the other hand, the buyers contend that there is plenty of wool in the market and that they can pay so much and no more. Then again, the growers lose by each added day of insurance and storage. Hence they are independent and refuse to stretch the limit. Each side holds good cards, and is playing to fill its hands.

The Washington output is practically sold, and the Idaho market is cleaned out. The Oregon market is yet to be opened, in fact the Pendleton sales on this week will draw the cork. Twenty-seven carloads of wool came in yesterday for the scouring mills and 17 today, while all the warehouses are receiving this season's clip about as rapidly as it can be handled.

After the sales here the situation may be a more open book, and the movement of the market can be perhaps more readily discerned, but until then it is a game between the buyers and the sellers, a feinting and sparring for an opening, with the odds about even.

If the buyers can bluff the growers into the belief that the market will not rise, they will get the wool, if, however, the growers hold a while, they hope to fill to the cards they have and call the bluff.

The Livestock Exhibit.

A quarter of a million dollars has been set aside by the Louisiana Purchase Exposition for the use of the Livestock department. Chief F. D. Coburn and his assistants have accomplished much, and are already assured that the livestock display at St. Louis will excel that ever made at any previous exposition. Thirty-seven acres of beautifully wooded land is devoted to the livestock exhibit, and fine pavilions, stables, etc., are being erected.

Old Men and the Unions.

Employers of skilled labor in all its branches are inclined to take the view that the problem of what to do with the aged employees is up to the unions. They say that some remedy should be suggested and acted upon at once. That there are many men who are still able to do first-class work, but who on account of age or for other reasons are not able to perform the amount of labor that is expected from the ordinary workman and who are in consequence, driven to seek odd jobs and other branches of employment that are not so remunerative, is a recognized fact among those who employ large bodies of workmen.—Chicago Daily News.

The Coachmen's Union.

Coachmen in private families, who formed a union in Chicago about two months ago, have been chartered by the Teamsters' National Union of America and its delegates seated in the teamsters' joint council. The union has a membership of about 200 and is still growing. No attempts will be made, according to the statement of Business Agent Johnson, for a uniform wage scale, but instead efforts will be directed toward bettering the condition of members, furnishing employers with good, reliable men and elevating the calling in general.

"Your new boss is an old campaigner, I believe," remarked Crumley. "Well," replied Worrit, "he's a great handshaker." "Is that so?" "Yes, he has shaken nearly all the old hands in the shop before he took charge."—Philadelphia Press.

"Don't you think that people pay too much attention to money nowadays?" "No, I don't," answered Senator Sorghum. "Time was when a $50-bill looked as big as a farm to a member of the legislature. Now he won't pay any attention to it what ever."—Washington Star.
