BROKE ALL RECORDS

BASEBALL HOSPITAL
BENEFIT A SUCCESS.

Two Hundred and Eighty Dollars Cleared for St. Anthony's—Score 22 to 21 in Favor of the Doctors—An Afternoon of Rare Fun and All Sorts of Ball.

It is a hard task, but it must be done, a necessary evil and it must be fought to a finish and forever left in peace and grateful memory. No one, unless he had as many arms as an octopus with which to wield his pen, and as many eyes as the fabled guardian slave of the Goddess Juno with which to spy out the numerous and bewildering changes of the game, could give an adequate and a full description of the battle between the knights of the saw and the sawyers of the wind yesterday afternoon on the Alta street grounds.

It looked from a little distance like a society ball in a beer garden, a hula-hula in the supreme court and a Highland fling, danced to the inspiration of Irish whiskey, all mingled and mixed into an evolution astounding and wonderful. In view of all these facts, one fancies if the remarks become incoherent or the thread of the discourse is lost in the tangle of the play and snapped in twain, it is not the fault of the scribe, but of the intricacy of the game.

Lawyers First at the Bat.

The lawyers went first to the bat and the doctors went at them. Dr.
Wiswell struck an attitude and Reeder struck the ball. But with all his effort he went out at first amid the cheers of the multitude. McCourt and Beckwith both sparred for wind until the umpire called them out.

Then Ringo attempted to start the ball rolling for the doctors. He struck three times, and before Mc-Court could pick the ball up from between his feet, the dignified medical man had ambled out to first and sat down to rest. While he was thus resting, dreaming of the time to quit and of the shady, cool veranda, and the cooling drinks passed by loving hands, the unsympathetic pitcher passed him on to second on a balk.
His captain made him go to third on a passed ball, and public sentiment forced him home on Wiswell's hit.

Wiswell, on the other hand, was wise, and went out at first, thus saving the long trip around the bases.
Dr. Mann was bashful about appearing in any rapid work around the track, fearing that by his grace and costume he would capture the grand stand.
He didn't want the grand stand, he wanted the game, and in order to win that he must not have his head turned.
Henderson got to first on a three-base hit over the left field. He might have got farther, but he fell down. However, he was gritty and tried to steal second, but went out amid the sorrowing exclamations of the fair ones in the stand.

Reporter in a Trance.

About this time the bewildering changes and rapid evolutions of the players so taxed the eyes of the reporter that he shut them for an hour or two, but he opened them again in the first half of the third inning in time to see Colonel J. H. Raley, with red shirt ablaze, and unlit cigar, charge fiercely on the opposing captain and the umpire. Like in ancient days when Horatius held the bridge, the warriors paused to watch the combat of the chiefs, but becoming alarmed about the safety of their champions, each faction overflowed the diamond. Here was where Judge Hartman made his mistake. Everyone knows that the judge is a man of peace, and he was anxious to avert hostilities, so seizing a large siphon of seltzer water, he carried it into the midst of the fray. He diverted hostilities, but in an unexpected manner. The players felt aggrieved that they should be offered the chaser before they got the whiskey, and rising in their indignation they chased the benevolent judge off the diamond.
They also chased the umpire, Clarence Penland, off the field, and substituted Folsome Talman, 5 years old, to lead them in the path of knowledge and to tell them what to do.
Under his treble commands they became docile and like lambs went again to the slaughter.

Then again the sun hurt the reporter's eyes, and when he opened them at the end of the game, the score was 22 to 21 in favor of the doctors, and only one man out, but as Dr. Cole's little boy remarked from the grand stand, "Papa is too tired to run," so the game was stopped and the crowd dispersed.

The net results of the game will be about $280, which will go to the benefit of the hospital. At least 1,000 people saw the game.

Judge Fitz Gerald on Vacation.
Thomas Fitz Gerald and son left this morning for The Dalles, where the judge will attend the state encampment of the Order of Eagles.
From there he will go to Portland and Vancouver, spending about 10 days before he returns to his duties here.

Improving Their Ranches.
Mike Gratz and his sister, Miss Annie, have contracted with Jacob Born, of Ukiah, to fence their claims in that country and build ranch houses upon the same. The work has been completed.
