ASKS FOR DAMAGES

A MICHIGAN SCHOOLMAM
SUES A CATTLE KING.

He Loved Her and Left Her, and Now She Wants $70,000 as a Balm for Her Wounded Feelings—Jim Heryford is Willing to Marry Her, But She Prefers the Cash.

Birdie N. McCarty, a Michigan school teacher, 32 years old, is suing Jim Heryford, a cattle king of Lakeview, for $70,000 for breach of promise. The trial is taking place in Portland.

Protestations of love, broken promises of marriage and her ruin are the charges brought by Miss McCarty against the big stockman. Heryford, on the other hand, declares that the woman has not been compromised, and that he has at all times been willing to take her as his wife.

According to the story of the plaintiff, Miss McCarty came to Lakeview in September, 1900, to teach school. She boarded at the home of Heryford, a widower of 45, with four children. Miss McCarty, at the time, was 29 years of age. "Jim" frequently drove her to and from the schoolhouse, and being a willing worker, it was his custom to build the school fire and do the sweeping. He was plainly looking for a wife, and his attentions to the teacher became marked. He was her escort to dances, debating vaudeville and other functions which the country affords. A strong friendship sprang up between the man and woman and this finally ripened into love. On Christmas eve, 1900, while driving her home from an evening gathering, Jim Heryford kissed the teacher by the light of the stars, and on the following night offered her his heart and hand. Miss McCarty declares Heryford promised to marry her and she consented on condition she be allowed to spend half her time after the marriage in Michigan. It was shortly after this that Heryford, the woman alleges, wronged her, and their relations continued until the summer of 1901, when she returned to Wayne, Mich., to prepare for the wedding.

The two corresponded during the summer until finally the stockman wrote that he no longer loved Miss McCarty, and asked that he be released from his promise to marry her. She wrote begging him to marry her. To this entreaty she received no response, and finally, after several months, upon the advice of attorneys, she threatened suit for breach of promise. Then Heryford agreed to take her, provided she would come to Reno, Nev., but she refused and last fall suit was filed in the United States court.

MAY LOSE FORT WALLA WALLA

General Funston Outlines the Possibility of Its Abandonment.

"From what observations I have been able to make during my inspection at Fort Walla Walla this morning, there is but one conclusion to be reached, and that is either the post will have to be entirely abandoned or be entirely rebuilt," said General Funston yesterday, according to the Walla Walla Union.

"This is an old post," he continued, "and even a hasty inspection shows very clearly that timbers are falling to pieces. It would not be expedient to undertake to repair these buildings."

"So far as the retention of the post is concerned, that is a matter which rests entirely with the department in Washington, and I presume the new general staff will have a great deal to say in the final settlement of these questions. As department commander, I have nothing to say on these subjects. To a certain extent I assume such recommendations as I might make would be considered, but no further."

This post has its advantages and its disadvantages. In its favor you have here good railway transportation facilities. Troops can be moved to the border or the seashore in short order. You have good water, good forage and excellent health conditions. On the other hand, there is a lack of target range, a very essential thing in army posts.

TO YOU.

Young man, you can make a hit—be it. It's up to you to do what you were made for and fed and prayed for.

So don't sit down and frown
And groan and moan
And wait—and rail at Fate—
and speak of a clique
That prevents events
From coming your way. A sure way
To invite disaster which comes the faster
If you peckon to it—for then you woo it.

Just say, "I will do better than Bill Or Ned or Fred or Ted."
As the case may be. Because, you see
A thing's half done that's well begun.
There's something you can do
In a way to pay.

Don't whine or grunt, but do your stunt.
And after awhile you'll smile
And say, "I may Be happy yet." You bet!

—Charles B. Loomis in Saturday Evening Post.

There are Others.

There is a citizen of this town who shall be nameless, who enjoys a real nice time as well as any one else, and whose wife has known so much of these nice times that she never expects him to be home until he arrives. He arrived the other night at a disgraceful hour, but got to bed, somehow, and appeared at breakfast without his appetite, bleary and repentant. His wife said nothing for some time, neither did he; but his curiosity was not to be stayed, and he finally asked: "My dear, who came home with me last night?"
Answered the wife, with a high, stern air: "I don't know, but judging from the sound in the hall, I think it must have been the expressman."
