BASHFUL FRED.

Passed Through This Morning en Route to Vancouver.

General Frederick Funston, the commander of the department of the Columbia, passed through the city this morning on his way to his station at Vancouver. The general is a bashful and modest man and likes not the inquisitive gaze of the curious. He likes to enjoy the secluded retreat of a Pullman, and not to be embarrassed by the vulgar stares of the assembled populace. This morning several of the people at the depot gathered about the window to look at the hero of the southern isles, but he was not kind to them and pulled the curtain down and left them to the contemplation of the blank and pallid blind.

THE WELCOME RAIN

UMATILLA COUNTY SOAKED
CENTER TO CIRCUMFERENCE

Four-Fifths of an Inch Fell Last Night and Yesterday Evening—Still Raining, With Good Prospects for Continued Showers.

Preceded by a rattle of thunder and vivid flashes of lightning, the long-awaited rain came yesterday evening at 4 o'clock.

Parching foothills and thirsty crops were revived and freshened. Dusty roads and weltering ranges were visited with a vigorous downpour that went to the roots of the grass and the bottom of the dust.

North, west and east of Pendleton the rain clouds hovered long and lovingly. The storm came on gently at first, then broke away and the critics of good old Jupiter Pluvius said "the storm is over; I told you so."

But their prophecy fell flat. Gathering up his cloud robes once more, the mangled old God of Rain shook down a torrent that paid off several mortgages, saved several farms and loaded several trains of wheat in Umatilla county. After a pattering prelude of 20 minutes, which scarcely laid the dust, the storm began to come down in earnest and for two hours sustained the reputation of Oregon.

Reports from every point in the county say that the rain came in time to save much of the crop. While the shower was heaviest west and north of Pendleton, yet the south part of the county got her share and feels that the wheat crop is now practically safe.

Weston, Adams, Athena, Milton, Vansycle, Juniper, Warren and other points north and east were soaked last night and are yet receiving a gentle rain.

Yesterday evening and last night .80 of an inch fell, and a good shower has fallen today in the immediate vicinity of Pendleton.

One feature of the shower last night was that it seemed to fall in spots. Six miles southwest on the McKay, scarcely any rain fell last night. A large amount of alfalfa was cut and in the shock in that locality and several farmers from there who were in the city at the time of the rain, were deploring the supposed loss of their hay.

To their surprise, they found that only a light shower had fallen there and their hay was safe.

They have not fared so well today. A good shower fell in that locality at noon, and is still coming down gently this evening.

One bad feature of the rain all over the county was the heavy downpour. It fell so fast that much of it ran off, carrying trash, dust, driftwood and rubbish with it. At places in this city it ran down the sidewalks four inches deep and several feet wide.

Many of the side streets that are out of the sprinklers' limits, got a soaking and drenching that will do away with dust for weeks to come.

Conservative estimates place the value of the rain at 1,000,000 bushels in Umatilla county.

The best authorities on crop conditions place the increased yield on account of the rain in the wheat section between Pendleton and Walla Walla at six bushels per acre, bringing the total estimated yield up to 28 bushels per acre.

The Baker City Herald of yesterday says of the rain in that section: "A severe wind, rain and thunder storm visited Baker City and county this afternoon. The water began to fall in torrents at 2:30 o'clock, and as the Herald goes to press the rain is gently falling. This rain is of almost untold value to Baker county and insures good crops and good pasturage for the remainder of the summer."

Reports from Grand Ronde are that the crops and range are now safe. The heaviest rainfall reported was near Heppner Junction.

The total rainfall in this city for the past 24 hours is .86 of an inch.

ALLEGED FORGERY

ED HANEY IS IN CUSTODY
CHARGED WITH SWINDLING.

Young Man is Said to Have Stolen a Suit of Clothes by Ways That Are Dark and Tricks That Are Vain—Is Now in Pendleton Jail.

The case of the state of Oregon vs. Ed Haney will in all probability come before the justice court this afternoon or tomorrow morning, when the defendant will be given his preliminary hearing and be either bound over or dismissed.

The complaint is filed by Charles Bond, of this city, and alleges that the defendant came into his store on Main street, on the afternoon of June 2, and then and there tendered to him as payment for a suit of clothes a check for $20, purporting to be drawn by Hartnett & Laing in favor of the bearer. The check was honored, the goods delivered and change given and in a few minutes the young man was on his way to the train, clothes, money and all.

Tuesday afternoon, June 2, the defendant, Haney, came into the store owned by Mr. Bond, and asked to look at some clothes. He was shown some suits and was very easy to please, saying that he liked the suit and that he would return in a little time and take it with him. He went out and did not return till after Mr. Bond had gone to his dinner. In the evening he came into the store and gave the check to Mr. Sullivan, a clerk in the store. The suit was wrapped up and the defendant pocketed his change and left the store.

Haney said that he had been working for the firm of Hartnett & Laing and that they had given him the check in payment for his services. When the check was presented at the bank it was promptly turned down as a forgery. Bond took the paper to the office of Dr. C. J. Smith and the firm was called up over the telephone. The alleged writers of the check disclaimed all knowledge of it and said that the young man had been in their employ for some time. The warrant was then made out for the arrest of the culprit and the officers put on the trail.

Haney evidently knew that the fraud would soon be discovered, for he immediately started to cover his tracks. He went to the train and took a ticket to Athena and from there he doubled to Colfax and Dayton and several other towns, expressing his grip several times as a blind. He was at last located at Tekoa and was arrested by the chief of police of that place, C. R. Hassock, several days ago. On the way to the jail Haney took to his heels and refused to stop when the officer called to him to halt, and Hassock took a shot at him. At first he shot to scare, but the young man refused to stop and then the marshal began to shoot in earnest. He shot five times at the
