WIRES STILL DOWN.

Over One Mile of Line Destroyed by Wind Storm.

T. Donovan, O. R. & N. lineman, was in the city this morning from Huron, where he has a force of men at work repairing the damage done to the telegraph line by the severe wind storm which swept over the Blue mountains Monday night.

About 5,000 feet of the line is still down, one wire for local use being strung up on sticks, trees, willows and other makeshift poles. It will be fully a week yet before the line is in as good condition as it was before the storm.

In places, huge trees fell across the line, and rolled down the mountain side, wrapping the wires about them like they were reels made on purpose for the business. The inland Telephone Company's line was torn down in places, but it escaped more fortunately than the O. R. & N. line.

WE WILL CELEBRATE

LAST NIGHT'S MEETING SETTLES THE QUESTION.

Both Sides of the Question Were Ably Presented and the Above Conclusion Reached—Twelve Hundred Dollars in Hand and in Sight for the Observance.

According to the call of the president, the Progress Club was called to order by R. Alexander last night at 7:30, with a large number of the membership in the hall.

The chair stated the object of the meeting in a few words. He said that there was about $1,000 in the bank to the credit of the Fourth of July fund, and that there was about $200 more in sight. He had called the meeting in response to the expression of the feeling of a large number of the people of the city to consider the advisability of calling the celebration off, and after paying the debts of the various committees, turning the surplus money over to the relief committee at Heppner for their use in the alleviation of the suffering at the point. He called for the opinions of the members present as to what the club should do.

Mr. Cohen, in order to bring the matter before the meeting, moved that the club go ahead with the celebration. Roosevelt seconded the motion, and it was placed before the meeting.

Mr. Cohen then addressed the meeting on behalf of his motion. There was no one in Heppner who would question the interest that Pendleton had in the sufferers of the flood. While he was there in the city he had seen at least 200 of the men of Pendleton, all working to do what they could for the relief of the conditions there. At the present time Pendleton had given $1,400 in cash toward the help of the people there, and had sent provisions to the value of at least $500, and this was not taking into consideration the many private subscriptions that had gone and about which none knew. He had not mentioned the extent of the subscriptions for the purpose of laudation, but to show that the city had taken an interest in the matter and that it would do more if it was necessary; and the aid was only begun. He thought that the city had gone too far in the celebration to go back now, and that while everything should be done for the people of Heppner, the city here should go on with the thing as they had started it and have the celebration.

Mr. Lyons was in favor, individually, of doing away with the celebration, for he did not think it was showing the proper spirit to have a holiday here when in the sister city they were burying their dead—the fruit of so great a calamity. But he was willing to abide by the decision of the majority and would do as the most of the members thought best to do.

J. A. Ogg thought that the city had gone too far to retract, but if the majority were in favor of not celebrating, then pay the debts of the various committees pro rata with the amount of the subscriptions, and refund the money left and then start a relief fund and more money could be raised in a short time than the Fourth fund had ever amounted to. The celebration fund had been put up by a very few people and was small. If the city started to send relief let the entire city have a chance to send, and the fund would be of a size that would do some good.

Roosevelt said that if the city had not done enough it could do better on the outside of the Fourth proposition than it could by turning the fund over. That action would not show more interest than it had already shown.

Portland and The Dalles and other cities had not given up their celebrations and it was not necessary that we should. They had gone on with their work and given liberally on the side.

Teutsch thought that the money was not a question. It was whether or not we wanted to celebrate in the face of the awful calamity that had come to the sister city. The money subscribed for the Fourth could be thrown in the creek or anything could be done with it, for it was not a question of the money, and it should be left out of the discussion. The question was of another sort. It was a question of sentiment and one that touched the hearts and not the pockets of the people. The committee had no right to touch the money subscribed, anyway. It was for the subscribers to say what they would do with the money, for it was theirs. Everyone should be free to do as they thought best and for that reason the monetary part of the matter should not be thought of. It was a question of sentiment.

The motion was then put and carried by a rising vote and after it had carried, on the motion of William Ingram, the resolution was made the unanimous voice of the meeting. The meeting then adjourned.

GREAT DAMAGE TO CROPS.

Pilot Rock Region Swept by Waterspouts and Hail.

L. Mustard, who resides four and one-half miles north of Pilot Rock, was in the city yesterday evening and reports the district around Pilot Rock in serious condition.

The heavy rains and waterspouts of the past week have washed away crops, roads, fences and bridges and left the country in a sorry plight.

He says the dwelling of Gus Bielik was washed a distance of three-quarters of a mile. At another place a new carriage and wagon were washed away and demolished.

Between Lee's crossing and Pilot Rock, on Birch creek, not a bridge is left.

The hail accompanying the storms beat down gardens and grain fields and did general damage.

Mr. Mustard had 300 chickens, 40 turkeys and one cow washed down the creek for over a mile.

In many places the roads are destroyed by the flood and in George's canyon the water ran 15 feet deep. Mr. Mustard says some small crops will not be harvested at all, others are badly damaged and will be cut in part.

CAUGHT FIRE TWICE

THE SECOND IGNITION RESULTED FROM FIRST.

Tenant Loses Practically All His Furniture, While the House is Badly Damaged—A Defective Lamp or a Discarded Match Did the Mischief.

Fire destroyed the house at 320 Aura street, owned by Julien Sharon, and occupied by T. E. Morgan, this morning at an early hour. Mrs. Morgan has been sick for some time, and last night about midnight Mr. Morgan lit the lamp to get something that his wife wanted, and while doing so knocked the chimney off. He afterward went back into the room and lit a match, and from one or the other of these the fire started.

The room was ablaze before the fire was noticed, and Mr. Morgan, with the aid of the garden hose, put the fire out, as he thought, and told the firemen that the trouble was all over and they could go. After they had gone the fire again broke out in the ceiling, and from this came the damage, for before the fire department could return to the scene the whole of the house was afire. Mr. Morgan lost all of his furniture practically, including his piano. He had an insurance of $1,000 on his property with Benney & Brownfield, of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan barely escaped from the building, and all of their clothes were burned.

The building was valued at $900 and was insured with J. R. Dickson for $600. The interior of the house is pretty badly damaged, a large part of the furniture that was not burned was damaged in removing it, or by the water after it was out of the house.

working in the rescue crews, but there is no place for a loafer to eat.

The 25 tents he took over were immediately stretched up to accommodate the homeless.

Every house in the city is open to the remnants of families left without homes.

He says teams are plentiful and all busy. The farmers in the district all have teams and the great need now is able-bodied men and money.

Mr. Wells says a territory from 300 to 500 feet wide and fully one and a quarter mile long in the best residence portion of town is swept clean, not a foundation stone being left and in many places a cellar is the only indication that a home once stood on the ground.

Just as he left town yesterday morning he heard the report from good authority that a four-months old child had been found still alive, wrapped up in a heavy blanket, under a pile of drift. It was rescued and brought to life. A boy about 11 years old was also found still alive under drift and will probably live.

Mr. Wells heard the report that his own wagon and himself had fallen through a bridge, after his arrival at Heppner.

He says the old settlers of the town claim that fully one-half the residents are unaccounted for and that no one will ever know the exact number of dead.

M. A. Rader Returns.

M. A. Rader returned from Heppner last night, where he has been for several days in charge of the undertaking at the morgue. Upon his arrival there he found the place in great confusion, and at once offered his services to the local undertaker. That official was worn out by the excitement and the labor, and gladly gave way. The first thing that was done was to plan some system for carrying on the work in order to facilitate the work and a partition was made across the back of the hall where the undertakers could work, and there all of the bodies were cared for.

First they were put across the tubs and their clothes were taken off and
