USEFUL INVENTION

CONTRIVANCE FOR PILING UP SACKED WHEAT IN MILLS.

is Now in Operation in Byers' Mills—Device of a Colfax Man—These Mills Average as Great an Output Per Year as the Albina Mills, Being Run Night and Day the Year Round.

W. S. Byers has installed in his warehouse a new machine, very few of which are to be found on the coast. It is a newly patented wheat elevator and was invented by a man at Colfax, being manufactured by the firm of Brown Brothers, of that place. The machine is a contrivance for the piling of sacked wheat in the warehouse, and is run by an electric motor. By its use the heavy sacks can be piled to the top of the large warehouse as fast as they can be wheeled to the foot of the machine.

The machine itself weighs about 1,000 pounds, and can be moved from one warehouse to the other without the loss of time, in this way saving many days and dollars in the course of a year. Mr. Byers is having all of his warehouses wired so that he can move the machine from one to the other as the occasion demands, using it to pile wheat or flour as he desires. The machine was installed at a cost of over $500.

Output Equals Albina.

Few people stop to realize the magnitude of the business carried on at the Byers mills. While it is not as large as that of the big mills at Albina, it turns out on the average as much flour in the course of the year as the latter institution. The Albina mill can grind when running at full capacity in the neighborhood of 2,000 barrels a day, while the capacity of the local mill is but 800 barrels; but the mills in the valley do not run all of the time, often laying off for more than a month each year, and they never work a night shift. The mills at this place, on the contrary, are never idle, and they run night and day the year round. They have to do this in order to keep abreast of their orders, and even then are not able to do so. Flour is being ground for the local mill at this time in Vallejo, Cal., in Spokane and Seattle. The mill has now on hand an order for the Oriental market aggregating 25,000 barrels, and in order to get the order off their hands the management of the mill had to call on the outside mills to help.

In 1874 the present mill was started with a capacity of 50 barrels a day. Then the mill was burned down, but was soon rebuilt and has grown to its present size in spite of the hard times and other unfavorable conditions. When the mill was built here there was hardly any wheat raised in this vicinity, and the railroad had not then been run through this part of the country.

One Million Bushels Per Year.

Last week Mr. Byers bought 50,000 bushels of wheat from the surrounding country, and for this he had to pay 65 cents per bushel at the place of purchase, making the cost at the mill in the neighborhood of 68 cents. There are now about 100,000 bushels in the warehouses, and this will all be used up by the time that this year's crop begins to be hauled. The mill uses about 1,000,000 bushels in the year.

The sudden jump in the price of wheat was due to the reported shortage in the Northwest crop. The wheat of this section will not grade to the average yield. While in the vicinity of Helix and Milton and some of the other towns in that part of the valley the wheat will be all right, in the other part of the valley the yield will fall away down. Not only is the straw short, but the heads are light in many localities and the grain is burned. In this vicinity the wheat will be short in growth, but the heads will be heavy, and the crop may be passably good, but it will not be as heavy as it should. The report that it will average 30 bushels is, in the opinion of the owner of the mill, erroneous and not to be relied on.

High Wheat Looked For.

Owing to this state of the supply the price will naturally rise, and high wheat quotations may be looked for, though it is yet too early to tell how high they will run. This section bears but a small influence in the market of the world, and the entire Oregon crop might fail without causing much rise in the stock quotations unless the failure was used as a lever by the stock jobbers for the purpose of forcing the price up for their own ends. While the crop is not a failure, it will be light, and the local prices may run well up in the scale, though as a general factor it will cut but a small figure in the central quotations.

Gone to the Valley.

Dr. and Mrs. E. A. Mann left this morning for the valley and points on the coast. While gone they will visit the old home of the doctor at Zena, and will also stop with friends and relatives in Salem and Portland, spending several weeks before returning to their home in this city.

Sale of Lots.
