BUSY AT HEPPEL

MATLOCK HAD CHARGE OF CLASSIFYING BAGGAGE.

Work of Clearing Was Systematized—Town Will Be Rebuilt, But Largely of Brick—Believed That the Final Count Will Show Two Hundred Dead.
W. F. Matlock returned last night from Heppner, where he has been since the first news reached here that there had been a hood at that place. When he was asked for something that would be of interest to the people concerning his experience there, he said that the people knew more about the conditions there than he did himself, for he had been so busy that he had not had time to look around him, and consequently saw only that which came under his eye as he went about his tasks.
From the time that Mr. Matlock left here, nearly two weeks ago, until he returned last evening, he had neither bathed, shaved nor changed his clothes. He had not had time, and so great was the pressure of the business there that he had not thought about it until he was ready to come home. The men there at the scene of the flood know less of the general condition of things than did the public, for each is intent on the task that is before him, and did not have time to ask what the next man was doing. The reporters there would gather the knowledge of all of the workers and thus the outside knew more of the affair than the majority of the men on the work.
When Mr. Matlock first went to the place he had charge of the work of handling and tagging all of the baggage that was found, and the general oversight of all of the property that was brought in as it was found by the searchers. Trunks and boxes of goods and all things of that character were brought in and the contents examined. From something in them the owners could generally be determined, and they were then tagged and put aside to await the call of the persons to whom they belonged, or the call of the persons who were the nearest of kin. By this systematic handling of the property along the course of the flood much of value was saved that otherwise would have been lost.
Workmen in Three Gangs.
The workmen there were divided into three big gangs or divisions—one from Portland under the general supervision of N. A. Davis; one comprising the Pendleton contingent, under Mr. Berkeley, and the other from Heppner and the vicinity, under Mr. Matlock. After the first few days he took charge of the men and has been thus engaged until his return. It was thought best by those in charge to now leave the work in the hands of the Heppner people and allow them to reap the benefit of the labor, and for this reason the men from the outside were recalled, and at present all of the men are from that place and the surrounding country.
The town is in good condition and the work there has been thorough and systematic. Most of the work now to do is below the town, in the drifts that extend below. There are miles of these and some of them will never be gone over. They are wedged into all kinds of shapes, and the work is slow and hard.
The people of the town are not discouraged by the calamity, and will rebuild the town as fast as is possible. Most of the buildings that are put up in the future will be of brick, so that when the town is again rebuilt it will be modern and substantial.
The total number of those missing or dead will be in the close neighborhood of 200, in the estimation of Mr. Matlock, who thinks that the number will not be five over or five under that amount. The bodies that are being recovered now are in a bad state of decomposition, and it will not be long before they will not be recognizable.
Mr. Matlock did not think that the distribution of the money that was left from the fund would be entrusted to a special man, but that it would be done by the executive committee of the Heppner people, who were in charge of the work at the present time. This committee is composed of Mr. Gilliam, the mayor, Mr. Shutt, the sheriff, and George Conser, well known as a banker. These men will have charge of the work from now on and will handle all of the funds.
From now on it is but a question of time and energy until the city of Heppner will be the same in size as to business as it was before the storm, though it will never recover from the shock of the calamity.

Rev. King Will Print the Minutes.
Rev. R. W. King, of the Baptist church, was awarded the contract by the Baptist Association for the printing of the minutes of the meetings just closed in this city. The reverend gentleman is a practical printer and has a small press and plant at his home in this city, and will do the work here. He printed the minutes of the session last year and put out a very creditable little book.
New Sawmill.
J. D. Casey, of Hilgard, is making preparation to begin the erection of a new sawmill of 30,000 feet capacity, near Meacham. He has a large body of timber land in that locality and will ship the lumber direct to Salt Lake.

BASE BALL SUNDAY

WONDERS AND INDIANS
PLAN TO DO GOOD WORK.
Former Will Wear League Uniforms, and Indians Will Send Their Strongest Men—Line-up is Given in Full.
The Wonders and the Indians from the reservation will meet on the diamond tomorrow for the first game that the former nine has played this year. The people of the city will remember the good ball that the boys put up last year, and from that can judge of the sport that they will see at the Alta street grounds tomorrow.
The lads will wear the uniforms of the league team and will endeavor to put up a quality of ball that the owners of the suits will not be ashamed of. The team has been strengthened and will go into the game with the determination to win.
The Indians are also sending the strongest team they have and will play their usual game. Since the Indian is never so much at home as when playing ball, a very interesting time is assured. W. H. Holly will umpire the game, to which an admission of 25 cents will be charged, with the privilege of the grand stand free.
