The sudden and unexpected death of Mr. Saunders occurred in the early hours of last night. The old gentleman was up watching the fireworks. He and his wife on going home retired early and she soon fell asleep, but was suddenly awakened by her husband's heavy breathing. CIRCUS IN TOWN TODAY.

Norris and Rowe Show to a Large Crowd This Afternoon.

The much read about, talked about and advertised Norris & Rowe's big shows arrived by special train this morning. There was quite a large crowd of men, women and children on hand at an early hour to see the hundreds of animals unloaded from the train.

A still greater crowd gathered at the show grounds to watch the erection of the big tents and when the street parade appeared the entire populace seemed to be on the streets. There were countless animals of various sizes and kinds from elephants to monkeys. There were scores of Shetland ponies in the procession, most of them drawing chariots, cages and other vehicles.

An immense crowd filled the tents this afternoon, and the unanimous opinion was that it was one of the brightest and best tented shows that has ever visited this city. The best thing that may be said of it is that it seems well, for it seems to do a bigger business each time it comes to town.

F. H. Taylor, of Portland, attempted suicide Monday night, by taking tincture of belladonna, in the presence of his family.
