POSSIBILITIES OF GRAND RONDE FOREST RESERVE.

Irrigation Reservoir Sites Found Everywhere in the Deep Gorges-Great Bodies of Commercial Timber Lie Yet Untouched.

W. H. B. Kent, agent of the bureau of forestry, has returned from his inspection of the La Grande forest reserve in Columbia county. Owing to the shortness of his stay in the timbered portion of that county he was unable to investigate extensively the irrigation possibilities as related to reservoirs in the mountains.

However, he is of the opinion that, owing to the narrow and deep gorges everywhere found, it will not be practicable to locate government reservicable to locate government reservicable. everywhere found, it will not be prac-ticable to locate government reser-voirs in the mountains, but that if decided upon, they will have to be lo-cated in the foothills, where dams to hold large volumes of water could be built at reasonable expense. The foothill sites Mr. Kent has not yet infoothill sites Mr. Kent has not yet inspected.

The mountains in Eastern Washington are rapidly reforesting," said Mr. Kent to the Walla Walla Union. "Most or the land, as is well known, has been at one time or another badly burned over by forest fires, doing great damage to the timber. But if the forests are now protected the mountains will again become wen timbered. The reforestation is very noticeable to the observer now. The solutions will be correct, So ington timber belt would never be a change your solution after any extent. He explained that the region is too rough and exposed.

In Columbia county the people with whom Mr Kent talked were strongly in tayor or the establishment of the reserve. Sheepmen, cattlemen and settlers allike expressed this desire. Their opposition in the past has been Their opposition in the past has been due to misunderstanding.
In Asotin county where such & storm of protest went up some time ago, there has also been a change of sentiment. The people of Asotin county are greatly interested in irrigation—in fact, they have already done considerable irrigation—and the possible location of a government reservoir in that county has likely had much to do with this change of scati-ment. It would be possible to use he Salmon river to supply the reservoir, although the construction of one would be very expensive in Wallowa county, Oregon, and Asotin county, Washington, the peo-ple of three townships are anxious to be cut out of the reserve. They are largely of the agricultural class; in fact, these three townships are distact, these three townships are dis-tinctly agricultural, and may be elim-inated from the reserve should it be proclaimed. The land is situated in townships 6 and 7, range 43, Asotin county, and in township 5, range 42, Wallowa county. All of it lies along the Grand Ronde, and it is said there is a lot of the land yet untaken which is fairly good agricultural country.
