KILLED AT THE SHOW GROUNDS

(Concluded.)

after coming down town he heard of the find at the grounds and came to the morgue to see if he knew the man. He said that the man was a canvas man, and that he was one of the oldest employes of the company, having served them for the last two years off and on. He was known as Happy Hoolihan by the men around the tents, and was a good-natured and inoffensive man.

Supposed to Be From Philadelphia.

Hoolihan was from Philadelphia originally. Sullivan thought, and though he was not sure, he thought that his name was Higgins. He had joined the company at Norfolk, Va., when they were in their winter quarters there last winter, and had been with them ever since they had been on the road this summer.

Sullivan had seen the dead man about 5 o'clock last night, and at that time he was all right. The man drank a good deal, but was not quarrelsome, and had had no enemies as far as he knew. He was a man who stood well with all of the people of the show, and was known and liked by the owners. Several times he had been discharged by different foremen and had been put to work by the proprietors of the show against the wish of the foremen. He was liked by the actors and actresses and often did little favors for them, and on that account was well liked by them.

Indications of Foul Play.

Sullivan could not see how the men who were cleaning the rounds of the canvas and the other things that went to make up the paraphernalia of the show failed to see the man when he was hurt and care for him, and was of the opinion that he had been dealt with foully by some one who was either drunk, or who had a grudge against him. Hoolihan was a drinking man and was slightly under the influence of liquor when he was seen at 5 o'clock, though not enough to be noticeable. It was almost impossible for him to have been run over by one of the wagons without the driver knowing something about it, and besides that there was usually a man behind the wagon looking for lost stakes and things of that sort.

Mrs. Cooper, who is camping near the ball ground, was awakened at 1 o'clock last night by the men taking the tent down, and heard some man outside her tent ask "if he was hurt, or was he dead?" Mrs. Cooper was very sleepy at the time and paid no attention to the matter, though when she awoke this morning and the news was told to her, she remembered the remarks as though they were a dream. She cannot recall the exact words of the man or men, but remembers them making some remark or asking some question of the import stated above.

Coroner's Investigation.

The coroner, Dr. W. G. Cole, empaneled a jury this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock and proceeded to inquire into the cause of the man's death. Tom Porter, Homer Campbell, Oil Gibson, Julef Dunn, John Jordan and J. A. Ogg were sworn in as jurors and were taken to view the body, after which they began the examination of the witnesses.

Fred Fenner, the boy who found the body, told of having seen the man on yesterday afternoon and that he was sober at the time. He told of having found him this morning, and of having notified the officers. At the time of going to press the examination is still proceeding, Sullivan, who worked for him, and others being called to tell what they knew of the affair.

Dr. Kirby is conducting the autopsy, and has found that all of the ribs on the right side have been broken, some of them in as many as three places. The wound in the right side was caused by the third rib being forced through the side, and not by any knife, for there is no wound on the inside of the cavity of the chest. The abdomen is distended and filled with blood, but that is the result of the internal injuries received when the wagon ran over the body. The wagon passed from the right foot up along the right leg and over the right side of the body, breaking the shoulder as it passed off. The chest and abdomen were badly crushed, and death was caused from the injuries then received.

From the indications at this stage of the investigation, the jury will in all probability find that the man came to his death from injuries received by being run over by one of the wagons of the company, under circumstances not to them known.

True Name Was Allen.

Manager Rowe, of the show, was called up by long distance 'phone from La Grande, this morning, and said he had not missed the person supposed to be "Happy Hoolihan," from the number of employes, at that time. He knew nothing of the occurrence until notified by the city marshal in La Grande, after his arrival there.

He said the name of the man called "Hoolihan" with the circus, was C. R. Allen, and that he had been with the company at different times for two years and was a native of Hartford, Conn. Aside from his being a faithful and industrious man, somewhat addicted to drink, he knew nothing of him.

THE PEOPLES WAREHOUSE

A PECULIAR PEST.

Porcupine Doing Great Damage to Fruit Trees.

Porcupines are destroying M. N. Bonham's fruit trees on his ranch south of town, says the Long Creek Light. Mr. Bonham has about 25 young trees that are bearing nicely and has discovered that the porcupines are raising havoc with them by climbing the trees, cutting off the fruit and tender twigs and breaking off lots of the larger limbs. Mr. Bonham has devised a scheme to keep these destructive little animals out of the trees by placing joints of stove pipe around the tree at the ground. This is said to be working satisfactorily as the porcupines are unable to penetrate the stove pipe with their claws and therefore, cannot climb the trees.
