DULL HIDE MARKET

HARD WORK TO GET A CARLOAD TOGETHER.

Demand Weak and Prices Low—Sheep Pelts Find a Coast Market. While Horse and Cattle Hides Go East—Eastern Market is Glutted and Dull—Good Demand for Rare Pelts That are Out of Market.

L. Shank of Portland, is in the city on a short visit in the interest of his business here. Mr. Shank is a hide and wool buyer of Portland, and has been out over the inland country buying stock for his store in that city. The hide market is dead now, most of the pelts being in the hands of the dealers and no new ones coming into the market to speak of. It is in the spring that the market is alive, for then the stock and sheep men suffer their heaviest losses.

At lambing time and up to May the market in sheep pelts is good, for then is the time that the sheep death rate is the highest. The cold rains and the hard winters kill them off in great numbers at that time, and the hide buyers reap the benefit of the growers' losses. It is the same way with the cattle and the horses, though in a much less degree, as they are better able to withstand the rigors of the climate than the sheep.

The prices in the market are very low and the demand is not great, although there are practically no pelts to be had. Mr. Shank will pick up a carload from here and there and will send it to his Portland house.

Owing to the burning of the mills at Oregon City, and another large one in California, there is not a great demand for the sheep pelts in this market. The woolen mills take most of the sheep pelts and since the two principal mills to which the consignments are made are out of business for a time, there is no place to which the hides can be sold.

The horse and cattle hides on the other hand, go to the East, principally to Boston, where they are bought by the leather tanning factories and converted into finished leather. But the market seems to be stocked in the East, and the factories are not calling for a great amount of material, so that the dealers are having a hard time to get rid of the large stores that they have accumulated.

For the rarer pelts there is a good demand, but as nearly all of these varieties are out of season it is only the stored pelts that can be found in the corners of the country that are on the market, so that the sale of them does not reach to any great figures. It will be several months before there will be much doing in the pelt line.

SHIELD'S PARK PROGRAM.

Seating Capacity About All Taken Last Night by a Refined Audience.

The park has been greatly improved in the mechanical features. The program is as good as could possibly be gotten together. The Cockatoo circus alone is well worth the price of admission.

The Kobers, ariel artists, and little Irene will be seen tonight for the last time, as their engagement closes this evening. Change of program Monday evening.

There will be no Sunday performance given. These entertainments are strictly refined and moral, as everyone who has seen them will testify. The same show that is given in Portland and elsewhere on the circuit will be given in Pendleton.

The audience last night was composed of some of Pendleton's best people and every one went away perfectly satisfied and the growing interest spectators for Mr. Shield's enterprise a liberal patronage as it richly deserves.

Women of Woodcraft Memorial.

The July number of the Pacific Echo, the official organ of the Women of Woodcraft, contains a touching memorial of the 10 members of the order who lost their lives in the Heppner disaster. The memorial is in the form of a great rugged monument, signifying endurance and strength, upon which is placed a scroll bearing the following names: Leonora Estes Rhea, Louella Gurdane, Mary A. Kernan, Mary Krug, Mina A. Long, Hannah B. McBride, Mary E. Matlock, Martha Salling, Ava Thornton and Florence French.

Dry Around Meacham.

J. B. Baker, a stockman and well known resident of the Meacham country, is in town today visiting with his many friends. Mr. Baker reports that the water is fast sinking out of sight in the streams of that section. Even after the recent rains the streams are low and are gradually going dry. Otherwise the country is in good shape, the stock being all in good condition and the crops moderately heavy.

Leave for an Outing.

D. B. Waffle and wife leave Monday for the Potts country, near Gardane, for a month's outing on their homestead. Mr. Waffle has been confined to his room for three months with typhoid fever and is yet very weak, but hopes to recuperate on mountain scenery and huckleberries.

Horses to Calgary.

J. F. Mahon shipped his horses out over the O. R. & N. today for Calgary, where they will be sold to settlers. Some of the cavalrymen were over from Walla Walla yesterday afternoon and looked over a few of the horses but as they seemed to be hard to please in the matter and were not loth to show their displeasure to the men in charge of the stock, Mr. Mahon refused to show all of the band he had picked out, and the sale was called off. All of the band of 100 head will be shipped to the northern country.
