UNARMED YET MIGHTY.

There is a point worth emphasizing in the general agreement between Catholics and non-Catholics, and this is the opinion shared alike by each that Pope Leo XIII was the most powerful pope of modern times.

Leo XIII broke a lance with the Iron Chancellor, Bismarck, and came out victorious. He secured important concessions alike from czar, kaiser and king. He made friends out of some of the traditional enemies of his church and left it after twenty-six years of papal power, stronger and more harmonious than ever before in its history.

And yet Leo had no army or navy. He had no temporal power except the influence he wielded as pope, and yet he achieved more than any armed nation in Christendom, in the same period. He was shorn of the little territory that was once the boasted strength of the popes of Rome. He was a virtual prisoner to the king of Italy, who took from his predecessor the last vestige of territory and made the city of Rome the property of Italy instead of the church. The history of Leo's triumphs is worthy of study. He made a peaceful conquest which will stand as a monument forever to the war of mind over the war of arms.

The total number of immigrants admitted into the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, was 857,946. The largest number admitted from any country was 230,622 from Italy and her islands, and the smallest number from any one country was 67 from the South Sea Islands. This total number of immigrants represents an increase of 208,302 over the year 1902. Frank P. Sargent, commissioner of immigration, who holds the office of grand master of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen for 20 years, and who is one of the best authorities in the United States on industrial subjects, says of the alarming increase in foreign immigration: "Immigration under present conditions presents a serious problem. No one can sit at his desk and absorb the facts that have come to us in reports without recognizing the peril that threatens should hard times come to this country. I am not an alarmist, but when I see hundreds of thousands of ignorant foreigners coming into our great cities every year, I think I can realize in some degree the danger that will come from their discontent and dissatisfaction when there are no wages to be earned."

Not content with the control of the shipping interests of the West Hill and Harriman, the twin railroad giants are perfecting plans to corner the lumber industry of the Pacific coast. With all the transportation facilities of the coast and the Pacific ocean in their grasp, they are in a position to enforce a control of the market. They are now buying up timber at every available point and are operating to fix prices, rates, markets and all other features of the lumber industry, judging from the treatment of the Hill merger, by the people of the Northwest, the lumber merger may not be such a menace as it appears on first glance. The people are tired of the merger proposition and will have a word to say about who controls the natural channels of trade, and to what extent public privileges are abused by private concerns.

The classes of graduates from the many institutions of learning found their degrees about this time and hold the footlights for a brief spell, but all the A. B.'s, LL. D.'s, Ph. D.'s and A. B.'s, after a sweet and happy chrysalis period are resolved into the old-fashioned degrees of Ma and Pa.

PERSISTENCY OF WRONG.

Our great mistake is that we lack patience and persistency of effort. Our great waste is the squandering of energy on non-essentials. The reason that the kickers and mischief-makers accomplish so much trouble is their persistent and everlasting stick-to-it-iveness. They beat us and spoil things because we allow them to excel us in persistency.

If we were as doggedly determined in our efforts to counteract their evil influence with a good influence; if we were as persistent with good as they are with ill will, with kindly words, as they with unkind words, with charity as they are with the antithesis of charity with the oil of kindness and temperate speech as they are with the sand of unkindness and intemperate speech, they could inevitably be beaten and turned down. The power of wrong and evil lies in their sleepless vigilance and unceasing effort. The weakness of good is that it grows lazy and careless and has too many lapses of activity.—Mrs. C. C. Van Orsdal, in Pacific Echo.

Took an hour to make and an hour to bake, did it? Folks had to dig the fruit out with a pickaxe. I'm told." But never again since now they use...

It is not the bee that flies the farthest and visits the greatest number of beckoning blooms in a day that returns at night heaviest laden with honey. Rather, it is that patient, persistent worker who alights upon the first flower he finds, probes deep and skillfully into its hidden treasures, and wastes no time in vain flight and fruitless labor. So it is in the human hive. That man achieves most, who turns every slightest opportunity to account who alights upon the first waiting task, organizes his forces, and wastes no precious time in vain pursuit of fancy or adventure. In the economy of the human hive every minute is part of man's allotted wealth and every one that is wasted or despised, reduces the sum of life's possibility, to that extent.—Rert Hoffman

The strike "germ" seems to be attacking the labor world in a most alarming manner. The country never experienced such a widespread epidemic of big, little, old and young, just and unjust, sensible, nonsensical, fast furious, groundless and disgusting strikes as is now sweeping over the country. The unions are laying foundations for a general and permanent disorganization by their extreme and thoughtless acts. The public will soon grow tired of the strikes and will demand that the business of the country be carried on without the consent of the agitator and the workman.

The generosity of J. W. Morrow, state land agent, formerly of Hesperia, and one of the most prominent of the younger generation in Eastern Oregon, is the kind that equits for something. Dozens of Mr. Morrow's neighbors lost the last vestige of their possessions in the Hopper disaster. Many more of them lost their property and families, making the calamity of double force to them. Mr. Morrow escaped with comparatively little loss, and now as a means of showing the size of his heart and mind, he offers to give away 20 building lots to residents of that city who lose their homes, in order that they may begin to build in a safe and convenient place. The property he will give away lies on high ground, between the courthouse and the school house, and is an ideal home site. This action on the part of Mr. Morrow will be a perpetual monument to his sterling qualities.

Enter the appointment of delegates to the meeting of the National Irrigation Association to be held in Ogden, Utah, on September 15-18. Yamhill county and the city of Pendleton are entitled to 10 delegates. The mayor of the county owns the commercial association, the wool-growers and the irrigation associations of the county are each allowed to appoint two delegates and it is hoped that each of these will find it sacrosanct to make well chosen appointments. The meeting is of national importance, and the full quota of delegates should be there to fight the battle of irrigation. The success of government irrigation in the West, depends largely upon the interest manifested by the people of the West. If they are careless of the details of the great question and fail to show their desire for progress, the government will take their inactivity as evidence that they do not want help, and will stop work and investigations. It is a time to strike, right now while the iron is hot.
