

Mrs. Emmons, saved from an operation for Ovaritis, tells how she was cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I am so pleased with the results I obtained from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I feel it a duty and a privilege to write you about it.

"I suffered for over five years with ovarian troubles, causing an unpleasant discharge, a great weakness, and at times a faintness would come over me which no amount of medicine, diet, or exercise seemed to correct. Your Vegetable Compound found the weak spot, however, within a few weeks—and saved me from an operation—all my troubles had disappeared, and I found myself once more healthy and well. Words fail to describe the real, true grateful feeling that is in my heart, and I want to tell every sick and suffering sister. Don't dally with medicines you know nothing about, but take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and take my word for it, you will be a different woman in a short time."

—Mrs. LAURA EMMONS, Wallerville, Ont. —$5000 for a trial of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

Don't hesitate to write to Mrs. Pinkham if there is anything about your case which you do not understand. She will treat you with kindness and her advice is free. No woman ever regretted writing her and she has helped thousands. Address is Lynn, Mass.

GROWTH OF AN IDEA

THREE PRESIDENTS' VIEWS ON IRRIGATION.

Harrison Thought Irrigation a Poor Makeshift for Rain—McKinley Thought Better of it, and Roosevelt is an Extremist on Reclamation.

Three presidents of the United States have toured the arid region of the West in the past 12 years. The view which they entertained of irrigation, as disclosed in their speeches, furnishes a most interesting gauge by which to measure the growth of that cause.

Benjamin Harrison traversed the West 12 years ago, in 1881. The date of his trip was coincident with the earliest national organization looking to a development of a widespread public sentiment in aid of irrigation. At that time nobody seriously dreamed of a system of public works, and certainly not of a public works to be built by the nation.

President Harrison marveled at the contrast between the desert and the garden wherever he beheld the results of irrigation. He said many graceful compliments to the pioneers who had overcome natural difficulties and made the streams flow out upon the land. But there was nothing, either in his speeches or his conversation, to show that he had any appreciation of the fact that he was in the presence of one of the tremendous national issues of the future.

Harrison No Irrigationist.

On the contrary, he held to the Eastern view that irrigation is a poor makeshift for rain and he was plainly relieved when he opened his eyes one morning to find himself back in the rainfall region. This was at Hastings, Neb. There he made a speech from the rear end of the train and congratulated his hearers on living in a place "where God furnishes the rain." The people applauded enthusiastically. At that time the name of irrigation had no power to evoke popular response anywhere.

McKinley and the West.

It was 10 years later when William McKinley made much the same trip that President Harrison had taken in 1881. During the intervening decade public sentiment had undergone a change concerning irrigation. Time had shown that the reclamation of arid lands, and the making of homes upon them, is a work which does not lend itself to speculative methods, like mining and town-booming. It is a sober industrial process which pays enormously in the way of social and economic gains, but does not return glittering profits to the absentee investor. Irrigation is for the irrigator, not for the boomer, the promoter and the speculator.

William McKinley looked upon the arid region with a vision which was denied his predecessor. He was able to see that irrigation possesses certain advantages over dependence on rainfalls and that the day would come when it would present a practical issue of stupendous moment. He said as much in his speeches and went further in private conversation. But he also added that it was a question for the future which would be dealt with after he had passed from the stage of action.

Roosevelt, the Champion.

Following McKinley by only two years, Theodore Roosevelt beheld a wave of public sentiment in behalf of national irrigation. True, he had done much to create this wave, both before and after his accession to the presidency. But no one man, even if he be first in all the land, makes American public opinion.

In the two short years intervening between the visits of McKinley and Roosevelt the irrigation idea took root and spread as perhaps no other social or economic proposition ever did in this country in the same space of time. The president and his traveling companions looked out and beheld the desert, as the earlier presidents and their friends had done. But they saw not the desert alone—they had the imagination and the gift of prophecy to see the streams harnessed and flowing, like bands of silver, across the soil; to see the brown waste give place to field, orchard and garden; to see cactus, sagebrush and greasewood fall back to make room for red-roofed, vine-covered cottages. And in their ears was the murmur of moving waters and the laughter of happy children.—William E. Smythe.

Schlitz

A Doctor's Reasons

Patient: "Why do you say Schlitz beer? Isn't any other beer as good?"

Doctor: "Perhaps; but I don't know it. I do know that Schlitz beer is pure."

Patient: "What do you mean by pure?"

Doctor: "I mean free from germs. Impurity means bacilli; and in a saccharine product like beer bacilli multiply rapidly. I do not recommend a beer that may contain them."

Patient: "How do you know that Schlitz beer is pure?"

Doctor: "I have seen it brewed. Cleanliness is carried to extremes in that brewery. The beer is cooled in plate glass rooms, in filtered air. The beer is then filtered. Yet, after all these precautions, every bottle is sterilized—by Pasteur's process—after it is sealed. I know that beer treated in that way is pure."

Patient: "And is pure beer good for me?"

Doctor: "It is good for anybody. The hops form a tonic; the barley a food. The trifle of alcohol is an aid to digestion. And the custom of drinking beer supplies the body with fluid to wash out the waste. People who don't drink beer seldom drink enough fluid of any kind. A great deal of ill-health is caused by the lack of it."

Patient: "But doesn't beer cause biliousness?"

Doctor: "Not Schlitz Beer. Biliousness is caused by 'green' beer—beer that is insufficiently aged. But Schlitz beer is always aged for months before it is marketed."

Jersey's Salt Water Day.

Seagirt, N. J., Aug. 8.—This is "salt water day" on the Jersey coast, and the farmers of Ocean and Monmouth counties, who have observed the custom for years, began to arrive in farm wagons with their families soon after sunrise. They had come for a day's outing and for their annual bath in old Neptune. Guests from neighboring summer hotels turned out in large numbers to view the picturesque scene. The bathing outfits, as usual, worn by the farmers and their families were remarkable for variety and originality.

Mehodist Elder Becomes an Indian.

L'Anse, Mich., Aug. 8.—The annual Ojibway Indian Methodist camp meeting, which has been in progress on the grounds at Pequaming this week, concluded today with an interesting ceremony. This was the adoption of Presiding Elder C. M. Thompson, of Marquette, into the Ojibway tribe. The event was consummated with imposing rites that included the christening the presiding elder with an Indian name.
