I pray for those whom Thou has given me here, All men and women to be one with me, To help each other, soothe, sustain and cheer, And draw in loving service nearer Thee.

My sister suffers in a garret here! My brothers labor and grow faint and pine; My baby wails for food: I cannot bear it, God! For all the gardens in the world are mine.

I cannot eat my daily bread alone! Send none to me if these cannot be fed! With them I stand or fall, for we are one! Father, give all of us our daily bread! —Margaret Halle.

FREE ADVERTISING.

The Condon Times sends out marked copies of a recent number, containing a timely article on the subject of free advertising for all kinds of street fairs, carnivals, expositions and other attractions which expect to make a profit from the patronage of the public. The article calls attention to the many objectional features of free advertising, and makes a few excellent points against the practice.

The East Oregonian has no fight to make on any concern which is legitimate and permanent in the country. The local county fair associations, the local street fairs, of which an agricultural exhibit comprises the principal part, and all such attractions which furnish amusement and instruction to the people, cannot be advertised too freely by the local press. The prime object of these is not to make a profit.

But where the outlandish features which are degrading the modern street fair, is the principal attraction, free space in the columns of the East Oregonian is not at their service. Where any amusement can be turned to the public good, and the people can gain information and genuine pleasure from witnessing it, too much cannot be said about it. Where the city, county or state would be benefitted by its production, it is part of the duty of the press to give it prominence.

The Lewis and Clark Fair has made no provision to pay for any advertising the St. Louis Fair, has left this matter to the liberality of the newspapers also, and the subject is a puzzling one to many.

In giving space to the advertising matter of the great events, the East Oregonian reasons in this way: They are historical, educational and beneficial in character. The people, through their legislatures have largely provided for the expense of these fairs. All are taxed more or less equally for the cost of the event, and it is the duty of every citizen in the country to do his share in giving the attraction publicity.

While a charge for admission is made, it is not with the object of making a profit for any individual. The expense of establishing and maintaining such affairs is enormous and all should be willing to advertise them liberally. The press alone should not be compelled to bear this burden. Business men in the community should never send out a bus-message of the event in question. Private letters should be written and every possible means used to spread the news of the country and the occasion.

It has been the custom of the East Oregonian to say to those seeking free advertising. Where you charge, we charge; where your attraction is free, our advertisement, to a limit, is free. But this rule cannot be applied rigidly in all cases. Where the people are interested, although a charge is made, for the exposition, fair or carnival, the East Oregonian feels that its duty is to the people, first, and will therefore publish such news matter as may concern its readers, although it be in the nature of advertising matter for a public attraction, as long as the attraction is intended to elevate and enlighten.

ENGLISH AND AMERICAN.

An interesting comparison may be drawn between the lot of the college students and clerks who a few weeks ago came West to help harvest the wheat crop in Kansas and the Dakotas and the London clerks who responded to the call of the English farmers in gathering their harvest.

The American volunteers found ready employment at wages from $2 to $3 a day and board and lodging, and many were dissatisfied even with these terms.

Many of the London clerks spent their vacation in the harvest fields working for lodging and board, and were glad of the opportunity. An English farmer writing to a London paper, after warning youths and weakly men against this scheme of working for board and lodging, naively writes:

"Evidence from all parts tells of the interest farmers are taking, and it is therefore with full knowledge of the responsibility one takes that I say that the experiment is a success and that the farmers' old trouble of shortage of labor at this time of the year is solved."

One would hope so! It is difficult from an American point of view to see how it could be solved more satisfactorily to the farmer unless the clerks were to pay for the privilege of harvesting the crops for nothing.

The O. R. & N. will furnish the delegates from Oregon to the Ogden Irrigation Congress with a special car, and the rate is but one fare for the round trip. This company is doing all that could be reasonably asked to secure a good representation from this state. It realizes more fully than a majority of the people, the great importance of the subject of irrigation. The industrial agent, R. C. Judson, is collecting an exhibit of irrigated products, to take to the congress, from this state, and any one having suitable samples of farm, fruit or garden products for this exhibit, should see that they are placed at the disposal of Mr. Judson. If left at this office, they will be delivered to him in good condition. It is possible that Umatilla county will have 10 or more active delegates at the convention.

GOVERNOR AS BOOTBLACK.

Governor Washburn was a thorough gentleman, through and through, courteous, well-bred, and with an entirely sufficient sense of his own dignity. But he had little respect for any false notions of gentility, and had a habit of going straight at any difficulty himself. To this habit he owed much of his success in life.

A very amusing story was told by Mrs. Washburn long after her husband's death. She was one of the brightest and sprightliest and wittiest of women. Her husband owed to her much of his success in life, as well as much of his comfort and domestic enjoyment. She used to give sometimes half a dozen entertainments in the same week. She was never disconcerted by any want of preparation or suddenness of demand upon her hospitality.

One day some quite distinguished guests arrived in Worcester unexpectedly, whom it was proper that she should keep to dinner. The simple arrangements which had been made for herself and her husband would not do. She accordingly went at once to the principal hotel of the town, in the neighborhood, and bargained with the landlord to send over the necessary courses for her table, which were just hot and cooked and ready for his own. She got off very comfortably without being detected.

Her story was that one time when Judge Washburn was governor the members of his staff came to Worcester on some public occasion and were all invited to his house to spend the night. When he got up in the morning he found to his consternation, that the man who was in the habit of doing such services at his house was sick, or for some other reason had failed to put in an appearance, and none of the boots of the young gentlemen were blacked. The governor was master of the situation. He descended to his cellar, took off his coat, blacked all the boots of the youngsters himself, and met them at breakfast with his usual pleasant courtesy, as if nothing had happened.

OUR RAILWAYS IN CHINA.

Building an American railroad in China is a different matter from any same operation at home.

Mr. Williams, the locating engineer of the line from Samsui to Hankow, works guarded by 70 soldiers, half of whom are imperial troops, half railway guards paid by the company.

A while ago the natives descended on the surveying party and destroyed or stole their charts, drawings and instruments. The United States gunboat Callao went to overawe the natives and the local mandarins offered a reward for the return of the plunder.

The "railway guards" are much more efficient than the imperial troops. These are native men armed with Martini-Henry rifles led by a high-caste native sub-officer and drilled by an American veteran. They are excellent soldiers. Native contractors finance the actual construction.—New York World.

Mother's Girl.

There exists often a very beautiful companionship between the mother and her daughter. The intimacy is frank, free and sympathetic. But some day the mother feels as if something had chilled this intimacy. The child is silent and sad, and seems to shun her mother instead of seeking her.

This change very often occurs when the young girl is crossing the border line of womanhood. She is morbid, nervous, fearful, as she enters upon this new experience.

The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription at such a time will do more than restore the normal balance of mind and body. It will establish the womanly function upon a basis of sound health, as well as improve the appetite, nourish the nerves, and promote the general physical health.

"Two years ago my daughter's health began to fail," writes Mrs. Dan Hall, of Brodhead, Green Co., Wis. "Everything that could be thought of was done to help her but it was of no use. When she began to complain she was quite stout, weighed 170—the picture of good health, until about the age of fourteen; then in six months she was so run down her weight was but 120. I felt I could not give her up as she was the only child I had, and I must say, Doctor, that only for your 'Favorite Prescription' my daughter could have been in her grave today. When she had taken one-half bottle the natural function was established and we bought another one, making only two bottles in all, and she completely recovered. Since then she is as well as can be."

The Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

NERVES GAVE WAY— PE-RU-NA CURED

Mrs. X. Schneider, 2100 Thirty-seventh Place, Chicago, Ill., writes: "After taking several remedies without result, I began in January, 1902, to take your valuable remedy, Peruna. I was a complete wreck. Had palpitation of the heart, cold hands and feet, female weakness, no appetite, trembling, sinking feeling nearly all the time. You said I was suffering with systemic catarrh, and I believe that I received your help in the nick of time. I followed your directions carefully and can say to-day that I am well again. I cannot thank you enough for my cure. I will always be your debtor. I have already recommended Peruna to my friends and neighbors and they all praise it. I wish that all suffering women would try it. I testify this according to the truth."—Mrs. X. Schneider.

Mrs. Fanny Klavatscher, of Summitville, N. Y., writes as follows: "For three months I suffered with pain in the back and in the region of the kidneys, and a dull, pressing sensation in the abdomen, and other symptoms of pelvic catarrh. "But after taking two bottles of Peruna I am entirely well, better than I ever was."—Mrs. Fanny Klavatscher. Send for "Health and Beauty," written especially for women by Dr. S. B. Hartman, President Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.
