RAINS HURT WHEAT

HAS INJURED STANDING GRAIN FOR MARKET USES.

There Are Large Quantities Near the Mountains That Has Not Been Cut — Will Have to Be Used for Feed — Farmers Are Rapidly Hauling Sacks to Warehouses — Export Prices.

The rains that have come over the county during the last part of this week have made a big difference in the value of the wheat that is yet in the fields. Throughout the county there is more grain yet standing than one man would want to lose. It is reported that Paul Bowman, of this city, has 400 acres in one field that has not been touched, and Laing and Hartnett have four or five days' combine work yet to do. This is all in the close vicinity of Pendleton, and closer to the mountains there are larger quantities of it that has not been cut. However, not a great loss will result for it there is a little dry weather the standing grain will be used for feed and while it will have no great marketable value it will be good for use.

The price at the mills is about the same as it has been for some time, ranging from 69 to 70 cents for the common run of the crop, while for the best quality of bluestem as high as 72 cents is being paid. The Byers' Mill has taken in so far 125,000 bushels and there is still more on the way as soon as the rains cease for a time and the farmers get a chance to haul to the city. But most of the wheat is in and it will not be many days before the hauling season is over for this year.

Export Prices.

In the export market the price is still at 87 cents with but little doing in the buying line, as the farmers will not haul their wheat into the warehouses for that price. And again there is not much call for the grain at the high prices at least from the Chinese trade, for the price of flour is pretty high for them at 70 cents a bushel for the wheat.

There is a good deal of speculation among the buyers and the growers alike, as to what attitude the market will reach in the future if it raises at all. Some of those who are handling grain and seem to know something of the conditions that govern the market, think that it is at a staying figure now and will not change to any great extent during the rest of the season.

Corn Damaged by Frost.

The reported extensive frosts in the corn belts of the Middle East, give hope to some of the growers here, who say that if the corn is damaged by the frost it will have a tendency to raise the price of Western feed and that the wheat will benefit. On the other hand, it is claimed that the corn is too far along to be hurt to a great extent and that if the grain was damaged the feeding qualities of the stuff would not be harmed to the extent of raising the prices of the crops of this part of the country.

Farmers Will Hold.

But, whatever the outcome of the situation, many of the wheat raisers of the county are holding their grain for a raise in price and will either lose or make in the coming months. If the price does rise it will have to come up high enough to cover the cost of insurance and storage and winter hauling before there will be a profit in the early selling.

HOME INDUSTRY.

Rigby-Clove Company Expects to Turn Out 15 Machines This Season.

The Rigby-Clove Combine has given great satisfaction in Sherman county where one was placed at the beginning of this season. As the result of the work done, the firm of Moore Brothers & Ginn, of Morz, has asked for the agency for the coming season and have agreed to take five of the machines with which to supply the farmers of that section in the harvest to come.

It is the intention of the foundry to put out about 15 machines between now and the time of the next harvest. If as much interest is shown as has been in the past it is possible that the number will be increased.

After a few oversights on the part of the men who put the machines together had been corrected, there was no difficulty experienced in their operation and it is thought by the builders that all of the combines sent into the fields during the coming year will work well from the time the horses are first hitched to them.

FIGHTING A TRUST

SALEM PAPER ADVISES FARMERS TO HOLD WHEAT.

Says Price Is Kept Down by the Portland Warehousemen — Farmers Should Hold and Combine to Keep Up Prices.

The Salem Journal has taken a stand against the Portland warehouse trust, which virtually controls the wheat market of Oregon.

It advises the farmers to combine and hold their wheat for higher prices. It takes the ground that the wheat sold early by farmers is used as a club to keep prices down. It has the following to say upon the subject:

"The Salem Journal has asked all the grain farmers who are its readers to consider the situation as to the market prices for grain.

"Many have already begun to haul to the warehouses and take whatever is offered, when they should unite and hold their grain.

"Grain, cotton manufactured goods and other staples are all going up, and it is a notorious fact that Oregon farmers get less for their wheat and other grain than in any Western state.

"In Kansas and other states the farmers are uniting to get a dollar a bushel for their wheat, and they can get that in Oregon if they stand firm, or if even half of them stand firm, and refuse to deliver grain.

"The wheat that goes into the warehouse for market and speculative purposes has passed out of the farmers' control, and is used as a club to beat down the prices.

"If farmers will begin this year to holding the whip of the warehouse trust, they can break the blight of monopoly that has crushed the grain growers for these many years.

"The Journal is just one small paper, but if it can see what is going on in other states, that it volunteers to make this fight for fair play for the grain farmer.

"By mere spreading of the facts that are being gathered, the grain farmers can form an organization and can all be put in touch with each other, and with the situation. Will you do it and help break the curse of the Portland elevator and warehouse trust, whose leaden hand is crushing agriculture and robbing it of millions?"

Kindergarten at Academy.

The Pendleton Academy will institute a kindergarten department on September 29, under the management of Mrs. J. H. Hall, an experienced kindergarten teacher. A team and vehicle will be provided to take the small scholars to and from the school. There have been numerous requests for this and the management has decided to permanently establish the department.
