AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

President and His Family Again in Washington.

Washington, Sept. 26.—The force of servants and other employees of the White House were up to their ears in work today getting everything in ship shape in anticipation of the return of the president and family from Oyster Bay.

During the summer nearly the entire interior of the executive mansion has been repainted and many other minor improvements have been made. Much of the furnishings have been renovated or replaced, the familiar crystal chandeliers of the parlors have been made smaller and numerous other changes made in line with the extensive alterations and improvements begun a year ago.

Fearful Odds Against Him.

Bed-ridden, alone and destitute. Such in brief was the condition of an old soldier by name of J. J. Havens, Versailles, O. For years he was troubled with kidney disease and neither doctors nor medicines gave him relief. At length he tried Electric Bitters. It put him on his feet in short order and now he testifies: "I'm on the road to complete recovery." Best on earth for liver and kidney troubles and all forms of stomach and bowel complaints. Only 50c. Guaranteed by Tallman & Co., druggists.

Farms for Sale.

We now have listed for sale some of the best wheat farms and stock ranches in the county. All the places are well improved and well supplied with water. Also some very desirable city property. Call and get prices.

A LITTLE STORY ABOUT COFFEE

People have erroneous ideas about the cup that cheers, but does not inebriate, and it is our purpose to set some of these ideas right.

Like the tea tree, if allowed to grow, the coffee tree would attain a height of twenty-five or thirty feet, but it is kept trimmed down to about six feet.

The berries grow two in a pod with the flat sides together; except at the top of the bush where one berry forms in a pod. These berries are round and are called by the trade Peaberry and Cara Cola. They are separated from the other berries by running them over a large inclined belt. The flat berries soon stop on the flat side while the round ones roll off. So in buying Cara Cola you do not know whether you are getting Guatemala, Salvador, Rio or some other kind, but you can console yourself by knowing that your dealer seldom knows any more than you.

After picking, the berries are dried in the sun. This is a time of much worry for the grower as rains hurt the commercial value of the coffee. At one time unscrupulous growers mixed small pebbles with the coffee, but heavy docking by the buyers put a stop to this practice.

Coffee is roasted to develop the volatile oil and make it palatable. You may have noticed the little round bubbles of oil floating in your cup. The coffees that are heavy in oil are called "good body" and are strong and pungent. They leave the pleasant after taste in the mouth that is much sought after by the connoisseur.

The roasting process is very interesting. The coffee is placed in a large cylinder that revolves around numerous gas jets. At every revolution a sample of the coffee is thrown out in a cup for inspection. At the next revolution an iron flange scrapes this sample back into the cylinder and leaves another in its place.

When it has reached the right stage it is dropped into a sieve on wheels and run over to the blower where it is quickly cooled.

The operator then thrusts a stove pipe like looking apparatus into the coffee, and in about two minutes the coffee has disappeared to some other part of the establishment to be put in barrels and sacks for shipping. This pipe draws the coffee up by suction.

Some roasters spray the coffee with glucose and inform their customers that it is glazed with the white of eggs. If the customer would stop and think they would know it would be impossible to get eggs enough to glaze one tenth of the amount these big roasters turn out. Then again, did you ever hear of their disposing of the yolks of the millions of eggs?

The ignorance of the people of the true value of coffee has lead many dealers to put various kinds of horse feed on the market and label it cereal coffee. If it is so good why label it coffee? The Maine experimental station analyzed the most highly advertised cereal coffee on the market that lays particular stress on its food properties, and after listing each chemical part, they said, "There was less of a food product in a gallon of this cereal coffee than in a quart of skim milk." Pretty thin, eh?

In conclusion we wish to say we make a specialty of Fine Coffees and Teas. We blend all our Coffees, except our Owl Special. We can give you any taste you want. If we don't get it the first time give us another trial. We would be wise indeed could we suit everyone the first trial, when often the customer does not know just what they want themselves. Our "Mother's Pride," at 25c is a wonder.

Years Truly,

OWL TEA HOUSE.
