PRAISES MORMONS
SKETCHES FROM THE IRRIGATION CONGRESS.

T. G. Halley Defends Oregon Fruit—Sam White Jokes With Tom Wright and Gets the Worst of the Bargain—Praise for the Mormons.

The Hood River Glacier prints the following handful of sketches from the Ogden Irrigation Congress.

"Hon. Thomas G. Halley, or Tom Halley as his friends love to call the mayor of Pendleton, overheard two women discussing the display of big red apples from Hood River, and couldn't resist the temptation to get in a good word for Oregon.

"Those apples must be painted," said one of the women. Tom assured them to the contrary, and went on to explain that there were carloads of such fruit in Oregon. He laid it all to the climate, and declared the Oregon girls, too, had just such rosy cheeks as the apples. "Why, put one beside the other and you can't tell which cheek to kiss."

Sam White and the Mule.
Sam White, the genial chairman of the democratic state central committee and his friend Tom Wright, the Union banker, were wending their way toward the fruit exhibit.

In a vacant lot some live Ogden merchant had placed an unique bill board framed in the form of an elephant. Sam began to twit his friend about the failure of the G. O. P. emblem to recognize such a staunch republican as Tom Wright.

The latter took it all good naturedly and awaited the chance to turn the cases. On their return they met a farmer leading a long-eared mule. "Now we'll see if he recognizes you," said Wright. The words were hardly out of his mouth before the mule made a bee-line for Sam, and it was all the farmer could do to restrain him (the mule).

All Praise to Mormons.
Formed of incandescent globes, and set between two huge mahogany pillars of the monster pipe organ in the tabernacle of the Latter Day Saints at Salt Lake City are the letters U-T-A-H. And how significant it is. No historian can write of Utah and leave the Mormons out.

The two are inseparable. To the traveler who stops off to visit the city of Zion and to see the wonders of the Great Salt Lake, there is nothing to make him feel as if he were in a strange land. Everything indicates a thriving, industrious and wealthy American community. But the barren mountains on every hand and the sage brush in the untilled fields offer an ever-present reminder that the country was a desert land half a century ago.

To the toll of the Mormons are due the green fields and templed cities of today. With the Mormons will rest the everlasting honor of pioneer work in the reclamation of the great American desert.

They were the first American irrigators—the first people to transform a sage-brush plain into rich farm lands and happy homes. How un-fitting, therefore, would it have seemed had that great movement for the reclamation of the arid West convened its first congress eleven years ago elsewhere than in Salt Lake City."

NEW IDAHO LAW
SCHEDULE TO SECRET ORDERS ADVANCED.

Physicians Cannot Make Contracts With Societies Less Than $1 Per Member Per Month—This is an Increase of $2.50 Per Quarter—is an Exceptionally Strong Law.

The physicians of Idaho have a new law relative to taking contracts to do work for secret societies. No doctor is allowed to make a contract less than $1 per member per month. This new ruling was made at the meeting of the Idaho State Medical Association, which has just been held in Boise, and the information was brought to Pendleton this morning by Dr. I. L. Magee, of Wallace, Idaho, who came through on No. 1.

This is a most extraordinary ruling and one that is used by but few states in the Union. Previous to the passing of this law the physicians were taking contracts with secret societies at the rate of 50 cents per member per quarter. It is an advance of $2.50 per quarter per member.

"This law will go into effect immediately," said Dr. Magee this morning. "If any of the physicians violate it they will be let out of the association, and if necessary a fine will be imposed. We are badly in need of such a law, because we were doing the work for entirely too little money. There was nothing in it for us. We were practically doing the work for nothing."

Dr. Magee is Honored.
Dr. Magee was honored while at the convention, by being elected chairman of the legislative board of the association. This is one of the most prominent positions of the organization. Mrs. Magee accompanied the doctor and they would have remained a few days in the city, but Mrs. Magee was extremely ill and for that reason they were hurrying home. This is the first time Dr. Magee had been in Pendleton since 26 years ago, and it is needless to say that the doctor expressed great surprise at the wonderful development of the city since that time.

PRES. KRUGER'S BIRTHDAY.
Former Ruler of Trans-Vaal Lives in France.
Paris, Oct. 10.—How swiftly even the most famous of men pass from the public mind when they are no longer in the limelight is evidenced by the fact that very few if any one noticed the anniversary today of Mr. Kruger, former president of the Trans-Vaal Republic, whereas the same occasion but one or two years ago was marked by public demonstrations and a flood of congratulatory messages. Mr. Kruger was born Oct. 10, 1825, and consequently this is his seventy-eighth birthday.

Dr. Garfield, of Victoria, B. C., Tells of Three Hundred Cases Wherein He Recommended the Use of Trib.

Dr. James G. Garfield, of Victoria, B. C., when asked, do you endorse TRIB as a cure for the liquor and tobacco habits? said: "I do. I have known your remedy long before it was sold to you, and can tell you of three hundred people that I have advised to take it. I never knew of a failure to cure where the party taking it was sincere."

Veterans Now Presenting Most Thrilling Play on American Stage.

The story of "Alexander the Great," the new play in which Louis James and Frederick Warde will appear at the Frazer theater next Wednesday evening, has for its two central characters Alexander, which will be played by Mr. James, and that of Perdicas, which will be assumed by Mr. Warde. The action of the play is developed somewhat as follows:

The drama opens in the palace of King Phillip, the father of Alexander. Perdicas, the minister of state, is first introduced, inculcating in the minds of the women of the court his desire to see the youthful Alexander diverted by such effeminate amusements as are most likely to dwarf his ambition for the future.

Cleopatra, the wife of Phillip, is seen to be a willing tool for his treachery. He points out to her that she can be a queen in name only until Phillip is no more, and that Alexander is likewise out of the way. An easy tool is found in Pausanius, who assassinates King Phillip during the fête which celebrates his return from the wars. On the death of Phillip, Alexander, who immediately comes to the throne, vows to consecrate memory by warlike deeds instead of tears.

The scene now shifts to the top of the mountains above the clouds. The mutiny of the generals is in progress because of their prolonged exile from home. The warring elements and general terror of their surroundings makes them believe they have arrived at the end of the world. Alexander is anxious enough to avenge his father's death, he would rather occur nearer home on account of dangers that confront the army. His return thither, and does not state to save Alexander's life from his assassination is attempted.

The last act is a scene in Babylon where Alexander, who is celebrating his marriage to Roxana, is bid farewell to his generals and particularly to Perdicas, on whom he conferred the kingdom of Babilonia. At the instigation of Perdicas, Alexander's wine is poisoned by Cleopatra, the action coming to a tragic climax in the death of Alexander. The sale opens Monday morning at 10 o'clock, and as this is the first appearance of these two stars, a capacity house may be expected.

He is living very quietly at his villa in the south of France.

For a while his place was the Mecca for Boer leaders and for Frenchmen and others who desired to show their sympathy for England's fallen enemy, but of late Mr. Kruger has received very few callers. He has never fully recovered from the shock of his wife's death and the most of the time is spent in reading the Bible and in reverie.

Crow Indians Gather.
Over 1,200 Crow Indians are congregated at Sheridan, Wyo., to attend the annual industrial fair. The tire tribe, almost, is encamped with all their stock on a hill overlooking the town of Sheridan. The fair runs, in which 500 and 600 of the race, are leading sports of the season.
