How to Sell a Crop and Still Have it.

B.....

A great many farmers carry their crops for a long time after harvest waiting for an advance in prices. Those who need money can get a large part of the value of their crop out in money and still hold the grain for an advance in the following

Suppose a farmer has 5,000 bushels of wheat which he can sell at 65 cents a bushel; let him sell it and receive $3,250 in payment; then let him buy 5,000 bushels of May wheat and margin it 5 cents a bushet. This will require $250,00. He will then have $1,000 to use as he sees fit If the price of May wheat goes up five cents per bushel, he will make $250 the same as if he had held his 5,000 bushels of

Quotations on Staples Furnished by Local Merchants and Revised Daily

The quality of potatoes coming to town this year is excellent. They are all dry grown, or grown without irrigation, and seem to be plentiful in all the stores. Dry onlons are also coming in in larger amounts than usual and some of them are of great usual, and some of them are of great size. California grapes continue to size. California grapes continue to grace the grocery store windows, and winter apples are also in evidence, in great quantities. Squashes are not so plentiful as they were a week ago, but their place has been taken by a fine supply of turnips and carrots. The local supply of potatoes is thought to be sufficient to run through the winter without bringing in North Yakima or Walla Walla potatoes, as is usually the case.

SOURCES OF KNOWLEDGE.

ven May Leave Something From Eve

erylody You Meet. One of the most useful success limbits one can form is that of learning some thing from everybody with whom a comes in contact. No information which can be nequired is too trivial to be ig nored:

Constantly measure yourself with the men you meet. You will find that every one can teach you something which you did not know before and which, perhaps, you would never have a chance to learn again if you did not acquire it from him.

Daniel Webster once made a great hit in arguing a case before a jury by repeating a story which he afterward said he had not thought of since he heard it fourteen years before. But Webster was always picking up some-thing for future use. His famous reply to Hayne, the greatest speech ever de livered on the American continent, was largely made up of little reserves which he had picked up here and there in his reading, from studying men and from observation.

Many a prominent novelist has col lected material for his stories by mak ing notes of his conversations with those he has met and by observation Charles Dickens got a great deal of the matter for some of his novels in this

One young man will go to a lecture and after spending an hour listening to the helpful, inspiring words of some prominent man will leave the hall or lecture room without having derived any benefit from the address. Another young man will attend the same lecture with an ambition to learn some Stock boarded at reasonable thing. He will drink in the speaker's sentences as if he were never to hear such words of encouragement and inspiration again. At the conclusion of the address he will determine that he will make more of his opportunities in the future; that he will read more, think more, study more, be more than he ever was before. Such a young man has a purpose and is determined to learn something from everything he comes in contact with and from every body he talks to. The other has no am bition, does not throw himself into what he does, lets his mind wander hither and thither, so that he never wholly understands what people are saying and therefore never derives any benefit or information from those with whom he converses. - Orison Swett Marden in Success.
