STRONG TESTIMONY.

This is Pendleton Testimony and Will Stand Investigation. If you should doubt the following and wish to investigate, you haven't to go to some other state in the union to prove it.

LAW AND EQUITY OF IRRIGATION

membered that for the next few years at least its entire attention and all money available for that purpose will be used in the construction of reservoirs on a large scale; too large for individual, corporate and district enterprises.

The national laws should be amended so that if within one of these districts there are a few farms, here and there upon which final proof has not been made, or government land which has not been entered, any bonds given by such district may become a lien upon that land the same as upon patented lands.

Will Economize Water.

To illustrate the advantages which the irrigation district system may have over the present conditions let us take one valley, for example, of say fifteen farmers. Let us assume that those fifteen farmers own in the aggregate twenty-four hundred acres.

Under district ownership we are safe in assuming that sixteen hundred inches would irrigate the twenty-four hundred acres. If distributed pro rata and under charge of competent water superintendents, who would see that no man was using it when not needed, and that when being used none is wasted.

Present System No System at All.

Now let us suppose that the stream flowing through this valley carries sixteen hundred inches of water. Under the present status of affairs the man who first settles upon the stream settles at its mouth. As strange as it may appear it will be found on investigation that in nine cases out of ten the lower end of the valleys were settled first, and as the country would settle up the population would move towards the source of the stream.

The Irrepressible Conflict.

Here we have six farmers owning 880 acres of land with the entire stream appropriated. The remaining sixteen hundred acres of land in the valley are left without settlements and without water. Later other people settle above on the stream and attempt to appropriate the water.

To Bring Order Out of Chaos. On the other hand let us assume that the valley of fifteen farmers should be organized into an irrigation district. The district, by condemnation proceedings, if found necessary, will become the entire owner of the water supply.

his pro rata and every farm be properly irrigated. As a result the district will have fifteen prosperous homes in place of six. The productivity of the valley will be increased threefold and the first six appropriators not damaged at all, but on the other hand, in many respects, will be benefited.

I will venture to say that there are none in this convention who live in a neighborhood where crops are raised by irrigation but can recall instances where a man has been decreed by the court to be the owner of a water right of a certain amount who does not need the amount of water decreed him by the court, yet prevents others from using it, and many may recall others who use more water than they need and even injure their crops unknowingly, and who do so for the purpose of trying to hold the entire amount of their appropriation, and prevent some neighbor, against whom he may have a prejudice, from receiving any share of it.

Needs Not Always the Same.

It has also become a well settled fact that lands which may have ten years ago required a given amount of water for irrigation purposes, do not need as much now. The longer lands are irrigated, as a rule, the less the amount of water required for its proper irrigation. This is especially true where sub-irrigation is depended upon, and generally the case under all circumstances, with but few exceptions; but under present conditions a man who was decreed two hundred inches of water thirty years ago is holding the same amount yet, and if he can not use all to an advantage, he usually sees to it that the other fellow does not use it.

Adjustment of Interests.

I have spoken thus far of irrigation districts independent of the government's aid in the construction of reservoirs and other methods of supplying water to consumers. Irrigation districts when properly organized and managed under properly framed laws, and I might here add, by the way, that I believe there is room for much improvement in the irrigation district law of our state; but irrigation district laws, when properly framed and properly in force will, I think, eventually be the solution and result in the adjustment of the many difficulties that will arise between the government and the settlers on the stream.

Common Rights and Common Owners

Each man may own the ditches upon his farm and distribute the water accordingly to his own notion when delivered to his place by the employees of the district, yet the entire community, whether it consists of one valley or numerous valleys, so long as within the boundaries of the district, will all be owners in common of the water supply with which their farms may be irrigated.

We will thus eliminate the friction so often arising between two owners of water rights. The question as to whether the doctrine of riparian ownership or prior appropriation shall be immaterial. All will be mutually benefited and it will prove to be not only a great step towards the solution of water litigation but the resources, productivity of the soil and population of the arid lands of our state will be increased proportionately.

Not a Sick Day Since.

"I was taken severely sick with kidney trouble. I tried all sorts of medicines, none of which relieved me. One day I saw an ad. of your Electric Bitters and determined to try that. After taking a few doses I felt relieved, and soon thereafter was entirely cured, and have not seen a sick day since."

Our famous crop of track sharps are up at break of day, "clocking" the horses in their morning sleep they spot the winners that bring you steady income. We Pick the Winners

The above showing is no improvement over that of September, and is not remarkable, since we and again during the past three years of our uninterrupted operations. Good as it is, however, we make it "look sick" by comparison with the showing we are going to make at the meeting of 10th New Orleans this month.

The system we employ to locate winners is identical with that used by "Pittsburg Paul," John W. Langdon, Joe Yeager, and other famous pluggers who win hundreds of thousands on the turf every year.

We gather our information of prospective winners through a force of expert horsemen who hold in their early morning trials, and in that way learn when they are ready to win.

The money that is played into the game by persistent losers, such as the large mass of unfortunates in which turf affairs are conducted under the auspices of the Jockey Club in the East, and the West, has inspired millions of capitalists and business men all over the country with such confidence in stock, grain and cotton markets, and this is one reason why transactions in the betting rings are so successful.

Another reason for the rapid growth of turf speculation in popular favor is the rapidity with which the money is returned to the bettor. The bettor is not required to wait for his account. By the next mail he is informed of the result of that day's operations and he has his hands. At the end of each week he receives a complete statement of his account, with a net profit of 25 per cent, which we deduct as our fee.

This gives a tone to legitimate turf speculation which cannot be found in the mere actions of the big exchanges, and this is why turfmen live more comfortably and live longer in transactions as on their minds, day and night, for weeks and sometimes months at a stretch.

Our Clients Won A Million Dollars

As it is well known that our clients have collectively won as much as a million dollars at a time, sometimes asked: "Why do not Maxim & Gay simply sit down and back their own selections?"

The answer is simple enough if one stops to consider the situation. Maxim & Gay, by dint of location, capital and advertising, have secured an enormous clientele, which means the command of millions of dollars. Our clients are larger than if they played on a basis of 25 per cent of winnings, which we charge for information, and commission, one man as customers is practically betting for us. The proof that this plan works for the benefit of the public is that we have won three weeks out of four and our books show that no customer who stuck to us for two months or more has lost a cent.

The principle upon which we operate is such that we must of necessity do the best we can for our clients. It is derived solely from a percentage of the winnings of our clients, and if we cannot win we lose. That we have been successful in making our clients win is amply proven by the fact that the average man who has followed our advice has won more money than he has lost.

A Few Hundreds of Recent Endorsement of the Press

CINCINNATI COMMERCIAL TRIBUNE, March 1, 1903. Maxim & Gay, who have been so successful in selecting winners at the New Orleans races, are in a class by themselves, and have no relation in their system of operation to the "get-rich-quick" schemes that have recently gone to pieces disastrously to those who patronized them.

Maxim & Gay guarantee their clients profits, not against losses, but merely play the money of their subscribers and deduct a fixed percentage from winnings for placing the commissions. This point is made clear in all their announcements. What they guarantee to do is to confidentially handle all money forwarded them and place it on the races just as if it were their own. They have in their employ as "clockers" the most expert judges of track work in the country, and there is not a horse at the New Orleans meeting that they have not a record of for three years, while imitators, who are placed to the benefit of their subscribers, and their reliable character is attested by the numerous winners they have picked in the past two weeks.

Maxim & Gay are the pioneers in this line of investment or speculation; they have been established three years; they conduct their business on straightforward business lines; their methods have been thoroughly investigated and are entirely different from those pursued by the "get-rich-quick" schemes, so-called, which were but recently closed by the authorities. The transactions of Maxim & Gay are legal in every sense, and they do exactly what they advertise to do, that is, play the money of their subscribers on the horses they judge will win, and they usually win. Prompt and proper accounting is made of the result, but they guarantee no fixed profits, though those who have continuously patronized them have not been losers.

ST. PAUL DISPATCH, February 28, 1903. An investigation of the methods of the Maxim & Gay Co. shows them to be conducting their business on straightforward business lines. They have been established nearly three years. Their profits are not based on the judgment of experts, charging a fee and deducting a fixed percentage from the commissions. They are the pioneers in this line of investment or speculation.

Since the incorporation of the Maxim & Gay Company, the casual racegoer can possess himself of more knowledge of the company and their chances of success, and he can do this by studying from the columns of various newspapers the turf plan of Maxim & Gay, which is entirely different from the exploits of the "get-rich-quick" schemes.

The Maxim & Gay Company, which is a corporation organized under the laws of New York state, the expert judgment of an experienced and successful turfman, and whose duty it is to find out for the bettor the horses which he could not select for himself, unless he devoted his entire life to the business. Even then, to do so, he would need a peculiar talent and a keen perception and natural ability.

MEMPHIS EVENING SCIMITAR. The advertisements that appear in the columns of various newspapers, the turf plan of Maxim & Gay, which is entirely different from the exploits of the "get-rich-quick" schemes, and which is published by and solely on business principles.
