THE LEADERS

It would be a good thing if in our public school courses in heroism to teach the boys and girls that, after all. while heroism is a fine thing and a great thing, it is a most uncomfortable thing and that possibly, on the whole, the best and most lasting work that is accomplished in life comes from a steady application of all one's best energies to a noble purpose, meeting with honest and patient effort the emergencles and vexations of daily life and holding true to the middle course, which assures success without bringing notoriety. A fixed purpose to do well that which one has to do will in the end bring laurels of more permathe unheralded hand that achieves its purpose than those which are even worthily bestowed upon the brow of bim who avails himself of an acosual chance in an abnormal fashion.-Har per's Weekly.
