

THANKSGIVING SALES

Since Monday morning there has been a continued round measure for the bargain hunter. The store has been crowded every hour since that time. If you want to be among the ones don't delay. Yesterday we had not enough clerks to wait on all the many customers, and we ask those who wait patiently to look over this inconvenience. Will do better after.

THEATER WALK-OUT.

Stage Managers, Ushers and Stage Hands Quit Work at Walla Walla Theater Saturday Night.

When the time came to raise the curtain on "Mr. Pickwick" at Walla Walla Saturday night, Manager Nixon found that he had not a man in the theater to assist in the performance. Owing to some misunderstanding about wages and work, the stage manager refused to work, and all the stage hands and ushers quit in sympathy. There was a busy scene for a few minutes, as the manager, assisted by a couple of friends seated the immense audience, that came to witness the play. A new crew was hurriedly picked up, and though a little late, "Mr. Pickwick" was presented just as if all the stage hands were experts in the business.
Mr. Nixon has given notice that none of the old crew will be employed again.

Guessing the Turkey's Weight.

T. C. Taylor has arranged a rope and pulley, with handle on the outside, and one end of a rope attached to a coop containing the monster turkey, inside, so that patrons may lift the bird, and be aided in guessing at the weight. The man guessing his weight first will have the privilege of eating the fine bird for Thanksgiving dinner. A crowd has been busy all day lifting the turkey, and it is safe to say that this rope has been stretched oftener today than any other rope in Pendleton.

J. F. Nowlin to Portland.
