GENERAL NEWS.

Frau Fischer, a professional lion-tamer, was dismembered by four angry lions a few days ago in Dessau, Germany, in a cage before an audience of several thousand people.

Five bodies—the last remaining—of miners who were killed in the Hanna, Wyo., mine disaster of June 30, have been recovered. They were not mangled or mangled, and death was evidently caused by damps.

Robert Leslie, aged 50 years, stowed away on a freight ship at Liverpool. He was in the hold without food or water and had to fight rats which tried to eat him. He was taken out at Newport News, after a 15-days' voyage, and will die from exhaustion and the effects of foul air.

Of the 669 deaths in San Francisco during November, 90 were caused by heart disease, 77 by consumption, 69 by pneumonia, 55 by all diseases of the brain, 34 by Bright's disease, 30 by cancer, 29 by diseases of the alimentary tract, 21 by whooping cough, 17 by cirrhosis of the liver.

One of the heavy bootlers lately exposed at Grand Rapids, Mich., was a man who had been honored many times by the voters with positions of honor and emolument, and for 20 years was known far and wide as "Honest John." So much for "the people's" judgment of human nature.

There are 1,100 saloons in Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, and it is believed one-third of them will be closed January 1, when the time comes for a renewal of licenses, on account of the steady decrease of drinking, owing to a great revival of temperance sentiment among the miners.

FOR BETTER LAWS

WESTERN STATES NEED IRRIGATION LEGISLATION

Need of Uniformity in All the States—Reclamation Service Ready to Advise With Western States on Needed Revisions of Existing Laws—Harmony Between State and Federal Government Required.

In speaking to the Washington correspondent of the Spokesman-Review, yesterday, F. H. Newell, chief engineer of the United States reclamation service, said that the water laws of Washington are not as complete as those in some of the other western states, and, as they stand at present, are not conducive to promoting the government work of reclaiming the arid land.

"The laws in Oregon," said he, "are somewhat similar to those of Washington, and, recognizing their inutility and inefficiency, a commission has been appointed in the state to revise and amend the laws in such a way as will tend to lessen the difficulties of the government in its work of irrigation, and it would be greatly beneficial to the state of Washington if such a commission might be appointed therein.

"The legal advisers of the reclamation service are at all times ready to lend their aid to the states in modifying and codifying new water laws so as to bring about the greatest possible development in the arid states.

"One of the great sources of trouble is the lack of uniformity in these laws, and it is to bring about a general set of laws applicable to all the states that the bureau is now bending its energies.

"So many of the irrigation propositions now under investigation are interstate in character and so lacking in harmony are the state laws that they certainly will retard, if not entirely prevent, the construction of work of this character."

This seems to be particularly applicable to the state of Washington, and it is up to the state to come at least half way to meet the government in its work there and not permit legislative measures to stand in the way of this great government work.

Cattle Taken Up.

The following cattle came to my place, eight miles north of Hella, December 4: White cow with bell on, one red cow, two red and white spotted cows and one black spotted cow. All are ear-marked except bell cow. I will sell said cattle at my place January 4, 1904, if not claimed before that date. Owner may have same by paying charges.

"CAMILLE" TONIGHT.

Dumas' Masterpiece at the Frazer This Evening.

"Camille, or the Fate of a Coquette," is the manner in which Dumas' tearful tale of Parisian life was styled in the program at the Grand last night, says the Butte Miner. The story of "Camille" and the true interpretation of her character, has been threshed over by critics for many years.

Before meeting Armand Duval, Camille was a woman of the half world. The theme of Dumas' story is to show that even a woman of the demi-monde can love as truly as her more fortunate sisters, who by position and breeding are more favored.

Camille, as represented by Miss Shirley, is a woman who, when she meets the man she loves, shows all the true instincts of womanhood and the intensity of her love is such that she sacrifices the glided pleasures of the life she has been leading. She also sacrifices all her property in the hope that she can lead a life that is real. Unhappily for her, the stain on her past cannot be blotted out.
