The frost has started the hide market into bloom, but the weather is so disagreeable that the market is not as brisk as it should be, or was at this time last year.

The prices are falling down and the demand is not as great as in the past, yet in spite of that a good trade is being driven. The furs are not being taken care of by those who have them to sell as they should be, to bring a good price in the market, for it seems that the trappers have gone out of the business and those who sell now do not know how to care for what they get. But the condition of the articles is good and the fur is in fine condition.

In the grocery line cabbage and onions have climbed a little owing to the fact that all of this produce comes from Portland and Walla Walla. Grapes have gone out of the market for the time. There is none of the homegrown article to be had, nor yet of those from California. In a couple of weeks the stores will have them in again, but they will cost the holiday consumer 15 cents a pound. They will be shipped from the the cold storage in San Francisco, where they have been stored from Mexico for the holiday trade. Apples are also higher, as all of the Apples are also higger as an of the local crop is about gone and the few that are left have to be culied to get the best. The prices range from 75 cents to $1.25 a box.

The cattle market is dull, and there is little doing though the prices are they have been about the same as they have been for several weeks past. The farmers and stockmen do not wish to sell at the figures quoted, and are holding as long as they can feed without a loss.

The rest of the market is the same as it has been quoted in the past.
