CLUB AND FEDERATION.

Club Directory.

The Thursday Afternoon meets once in two weeks, Thursdays.
The Current Literature, alternate Fridays.
The Woman's Club meets the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month.

The Sacajawea Statue Association sends the following interesting matter for the club column this week, and it is hoped that every Pendleton woman will feel that she has some personal interest in this matter.

Oregon women are asked to show their appreciation, in a worthy way, of the good faith and loyalty and knowledge of this young Indian woman in leading the great explorers to the Oregon country. The statue seems to be a proper method of commemoration. Shall we do our part? Pendleton has no vice president of the Sacajawea Statue Association as yet. Is there not some patriotic Oregonian among the city's able women who will take up this work? Full information can be had by addressing Mrs. S. A. Evans, Oswego, the secretary of the association.

Sacajawea.

It is a most gratifying and promising indication that so many clubs, women and organizations are asking questions regarding the Sacajawea fund and wanting the answers given through this department, "that others may know." It would take more space than is at our command for this one topic to try to answer them all in one week, but we assure those who have sent in their questions that each shall be answered in turn.

The one pressing this week is from a club woman who is a vice president of the association. In her letter she laments the rush of Christmas work and incidentally the tax upon the financial resources of the family to properly celebrate the holiday season as demoralizing to other work or money raising, but says: "If we may have a few months we will raise our proportion. How long will be given us in which to raise it?" I think many vice presidents throughout the state might like to know this if you could have it answered in the woman's department of the Journal.

Submitting this question to the executive head of the association, we are authorized to say: "Unless competing for a prize other than 'The Conquest,' any time within a year the money may be turned in, but the association earnestly requests that every town or person appealed to, if they intend to respond, will write to the secretary stating how much they will promise to pledge to the association, and if they do not feel like stating a set amount, simply saying something may be expected from them. If there are any who refuse to contribute—but why provide for a condition entirely impossible among Oregon women?"

The association does not ask a pledge for the amount set opposite the town—but it is left entirely for the town to determine what they can or will give, but this information is absolutely necessary for properly promoting the work by the officers.

Two hundred and fifty copies of "The Conquest," which were donated by the McClurg Publishing company of Chicago, have arrived and are in charge of the first vice president, Mrs. C. M. Cartwright, 215 Seventh street. Mrs. Eva Emery Dye, the author, spent the greater part of one day this week inscribing in them a pretty little sentiment appropriate to the season and the work, with her autograph, and they are now ready for distribution. The first to be sent out were three copies to the Ladies' Lewis and Clark club of Independence.

Any town organization or individual will be entitled to a copy for every $10 contributed to the statue fund. A copy of "The Conquest" was mailed to Burns on receipt of its contribution. The Ladies' Afternoon club of Burns, one of the newest in the state, was among the first to respond with a promise "to do something for Sacajawea," and during the past week made good its promise with a donation of $15.35, which is largely in excess of its club proportion, as it is yet a small club and is working desperately hard for a library and reading room.

A well known and enthusiastic club woman, one who appreciates an advantage when it is offered, has written asking this department to suggest some way by which towns in the state may raise the money apportioned to them for the Sacajawea fund. A brief resume of the ideas and the methods planned by the association may simplify the matter and assist the vice presidents.

The basis of this endeavor is that, above everything else, it shall be woman's tribute to womanhood, as exemplified by the services of Sacajawea to the Lewis and Clark expedition, and shall be their contribution to the fair which will commemorate the centennial of the event.

This does not mean that women, out of their own pockets, shall pay the money necessary for the erection of this statue, but that theirs is the task of raising it in their own way and by their own ingenuity.

And now as to the question in hand, and one which comes to the association, in one form or another, every day: "How can this money be raised?" First—Have you not in your midst some pioneers who might be too old to go out to an entertainment or anything of that kind, and yet would like to add their mites to perpetuate the memory of the first mother who carried her baby into the Oregon country? Have a little book in your pocket and ask them for a contribution, if it is only a membership fee of 50 cents. Don't fail to write their names down when they have contributed, that they may be on that roll of honor when it rests within the cornerstone.

A purely Indian entertainment is as yet new and will lend itself to the various fancies of many bright minds. As this is the day of Indian curios, any town can get up a creditable display. With a hall so decorated, a tepee, a few pretty girls in Indian costume, the possibilities for a program are limitless.

In one town the Order of Redmen are preparing and practicing for an entertainment to be given after Christmas for the benefit of the Sacajawea fund. It is their purpose to turn the money over to the vice president of their town to help make up her proportion. In every town where there is such an order their aid should be solicited.

The Daughters of the American Revolution might give a colonial ball; the Relief Corps a bean bake supper. Every church society should contribute, for was not Sacajawea the first Indian woman west of the Missouri to embrace Christianity?

If your club has not enough money in its treasury to give outright, more in proportion to its size than any other woman's organization in your town, make it. We are not an advocate of the dinners, suppers and bazaars so popular in days gone by, when women contributed twice as much in provisions as they would have been willing to give in money, and then exhausted themselves physically in order to have a small cash balance, but there are so many new, amusing and delightful entertainments to be given at such little expenditure of time and struggle, that no club could be justified in refusing a liberal donation.

An autograph copy of "The Conquest" is to be given as a prize for every $10 contributed. Many amicable contests might be inaugurated, making this the prize—for instance, the one in the organization getting the most members or greatest subscriptions to be entitled to the prize. This prize might be offered in the schools to every room or child that would raise the $10. It requires but 100 10-cent admissions, or 40 25-cent ones to any entertainment to pay for this prize, which might be offered in a contest over spelling, debating, story telling, candy pulling or anything that a prize might be contested for. The difficulty of raising the money, it is thus seen, is not so insurmountable.

The association will be glad to furnish any aids at its command to assist the vice presidents. Booklets telling the story of Sacajawea may be had by applying to any officer of the association. Buttons, which are particularly popular with the children, may be had from Mrs. M. A. Dalton, 451 Alder street, Portland, and paid for when sold, the town being credited with the money thus obtained, over the actual cost of the buttons. The secretary will soon have new matter to offer to assist in getting up Indian entertainments or Indian days for clubs.

If the school children wish to sell the buttons mentioned, there is already a supply of them in Pendleton. Information can be had of them at the East Oregonian office.

CURED WHEN OTHERS FAILED

1056 Winneamac Avenue, Chicago, Ill., Oct. 25, 1902.

Wine of Cardui can always be relied upon to cure when everything else fails. It is a certain cure for female diseases in their worst forms. I suffered for years with ulceration. Intense pains in the womb and ovaries and dreadful headaches unfitted me for my work. Finally I grew so ill that I had to keep to my bed. The pains were so intense at times as to cause spasms and a disagreeable discharge drained my life forces. In my extremity after all else had failed, I tried Wine of Cardui. After using it for two weeks I began to improve so rapidly that I felt encouraged to keep up the treatment, which I did for eight weeks, but at the end of that time I was entirely cured. When relief was mine and how new and beautiful life looked to me when my health was restored. Only those who have passed through such a stage of sickness as I have will understand how much I value Wine of Cardui. It is indeed a boon to sick women.

OLDEST RETIRED OFFICER.

Rear Admiral George B. Balch, U. S. N., is 82 Years Old.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 2.—Rear Admiral George B. Balch, U. S. N., retired, who enjoys the distinction of being the oldest living flag officer of Uncle Sam's navy, will be 82 years old tomorrow and will quietly observe the day at his home in this city. Admiral Balch saw nearly a half century of active service, but notwithstanding this and the additional fact that he has added 20 years to his age since his retirement he is active and rugged and takes a keen interest in everything pertaining to the growth of the United States navy.

Admiral Balch is a Southerner, having been born in Tennessee in 1821. He spent his boyhood in Alabama until his sixteenth year, when he was appointed a midshipman after the old style, and traveled to New York to don his uniform and join the historic old sloop Cyane, in which he spent his first three years of service in the Mediterranean and along the coast of Africa.

He saw active service in the Mexican war and also took part in many of the most memorable naval engagements in the war between the states in the early sixties. At the time of his retirement from active service, in 1882, he was commander of the Pacific fleet.
