MR. DIVEN RESIGNS

FORMAL RESIGNATION TENDERED YESTERDAY

Will Take Up Missionary Work Systematically and Will Reside Near Town and at the Temple—Has Been Very Successful in Building Up the Church in This Place.

Robert J. Diven, the pastor of the Presbyterian church, read his resignation to the congregation of his church yesterday at the morning service.

Mr. Diven has been at the head of the Presbyterian church for nearly three years, and has succeeded in building it up until it is now one of the most prosperous congregations in the city. He has been very successful in his work, and is well liked by the members, to whom his resignation came as a surprise and disappointment. A congregational meeting has been called for Wednesday evening next, when the resignation will be acted upon by the members of the church. Mr. Diven was forced into giving up his work in the city by trouble he has been having with his eyes. He has been suffering from weak eyes for some time and his doctor advised him to give up his work here for a time in order to save his eyesight.

Mr. and Mrs. Diven will not leave the city, but will remove to a little place near the race track, and Mr. Diven will take up the mission work. He will be placed in charge of all of the missions now formed, and will endeavor to broaden the work and enlarge his field. He will have direct charge of all of the missionary work of this section, and will carry his efforts into the small towns of the vicinity, where the Presbyterian church has no established congregations, and will cover all of the field in this part of the state.

FOR TELEPHONE BETTERMENT

Aggressive Measures Will Be Taken to That End.

There is strong talk among the business men of the city and others who have to use the telephone system extensively, of some form of consolidation for the betterment of the service.

It is the opinion of those who know and those who are interested in the matter that the company should do the right thing by the city at this time, when the change is being made in the central office, and put in an up-to-date system. It has been claimed by the management of the system that owing to the small number of 'phones in Pendleton it will not pay them to better the service. Nevertheless smaller places and those where the volume of business is not nearly as large as it is here, often have the most modern systems. This, the business men claim to be unjust to Pendleton, and they are seeking a remedy.

Several of the most prominent and heavily interested men in the city are talking of incorporation, and if no other way can be found out of the woods it is their plan to put in a private system for their convenience and profit. Plans in this direction have been discussed for some time and are under way.

It is understood, on the other hand, that the management of the company is ready to hear arguments on the question, and will be here in a short time to look into the situation.

Whether or not this is true cannot be said, but it is certain that the people are beginning to rouse themselves to the necessity of taking some action in the matter.

FOUND HIS SAW.

The Tool Had Been Lost Twenty-Eight Years.

A short time ago Harry Collins, while repairing the belfry of the Thompson street Methodist church, found a carpenter's hand-saw covered with two or three inches of dust. It was very little rusted and was in perfect repair. The tool had been "boxed into" the structure of the belfry, evidently, when the belfry was first built, being in a place where it could not possibly have slipped or fallen after the belfry was completed.

The saw has been since identified by W. B. Mays, who built the entire church and lost the saw while building it. Twenty-eight years' disuse has given the saw a rare temper, and has not injured it in the least.

KNOWN IN PENDLETON.

Prince and Daniels, Peripatetic Elks, Were Here in August.

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 11.—Albert Kimmons Prince and Guy Daniels, who were lost in the wreck of the steamer Clallam, were Kansas City musicians who were making a concert tour of the world. Prince was a brother of Lulu Prince Kennedy, who shot and killed her husband, Phillip Kennedy, in this city three years ago. Prince himself, was indicted, charged with complicity in the murder, but the charge against him was dismissed and he was never tried.

[The pair were in Pendleton August last for a week, and a month later for a few days. They had during the past four years visited most of the cities in the United States, having 5,000 and more population, and announced their intention of visiting all the cities in the world of that size.]

HOLD-UP AT BOISE.

Two Masked Men Get Seventy-five Cents and Get Away.

Boise, Idaho, Jan. 11.—Two well-dressed men, wearing black cloth masks, entered the office of the Wood River barn, at Eleventh and Main streets, about 11 o'clock last night and robbed the night man, James M. Johnson, of 75 cents, all the money he happened to have on his person. They made an ineffectual attempt to open the office desk in search of more money, but finding it a harder job than they expected, gave up the task and left the barn, heading south towards the depot.

Peculiar System of Laundering in the Philippines—A Climate That Forces Many Compromises on the Clothing Question to Combine Comfort, Cleanliness and Decency.

J. F. Robinson is in receipt of a letter from J. I. Huston, now employed in the government bureau of printing at Manila, in which he describes the Manila steam laundry as it is. Part of the letter is as follows:

"The prices are, I believe, about the same as those in the states, while their labor is much cheaper. A week ago I visited the Oakland steam laundry here and spent an interesting half hour through the place. I found the manager, Mr. A. J. Louis, who is a good looking American negro, and who treated me with elated politeness and seemed to be very well educated. The building is crudely constructed and is comparatively a shed some 100 by 70 feet in dimensions, and I should judge with a ground floor. The entire surrounding walls seemed to be made of sliding or rolling doors, all of which were thrown wide open. The building corners on a block, the other two sides being surrounded by an open space densely shaded with palm and banana trees.

Entering the building, which is but one long room, I found Mr. Louis in his office in a corner. The office furniture consisted of one bamboo stool and two dry goods boxes, one large one used for a table, the other a smaller one nailed to the wall and used for a book case. Across the room in the other corners were several Chinese busily engaged in receiving or marking goods or else preparing the finished work for delivery. This corner is well shelved, where the bundles are kept. Near this they have a sort of counter made of a broad board supported on a couple of boxes.

Next to the corners are the ironers and ironing machines, which looked to be of modern invention. Close to these were the boilers, tubs and other paraphernalia of the plant. I should judge that there are at least 150 laborers working in the place, principally Filipinos and mostly women, with here and there a Chinaman who seemed to be—foreman of departments. I did not see a white person in the place. The work they do as compared to that done in the states is very poor. That done on our collars and cuffs is a complete failure, they being returned without the gloss and possessing a dead, ragged and stained appearance. Several of the garments that I have sent have come back practically ruined from rust, so that I have quit patronizing the place and sent my laundry to a Chinese laundry, which charges me about $6 for a hundred garments. The laundry bill here is the chief expense, as white garments are worn almost exclusively and one suit a day is a fair average. Collars and cuffs are dispensed with by many. The coat or blouse is made with a straight standing collar, that stands close to the neck. Underneath the coat is usually worn a thin gauze undershirt with sleeves to the elbow.

Manila is practically a frontier town and living expenses are high. There is plenty of money in circulation and many men and firms are becoming rich while others are going broke. While I would not advise anyone to come here, I would not tell them to stay away.

The country and government is entirely foreign from that at home and an American has to look out for himself.
