AMONG THE EXCHANGES OF THE INLAND EMPIRE

To Welcome Any Relief.

"If the O. R. & N. road is built up into Idaho county this year, the people will throw up their hats and holler. But it wouldn't be a bad idea to throw up a few hats and holler a little right now to give the electric road a good start. An electric road scheme is feasible. It opens up what is said by all who have seen it, to be the largest, richest section of the whole west as yet without a railroad. The traffic of this section is enough to insure a large interest on the coast of the road. And the people can build it themselves by guaranteeing say half a million dollars of the first issue bonds to start construction, and then bonding the road for the balance. Such a road would be worth millions of dollars to the country between here and Lewiston. The people could have it for half a million, and have their money well invested at the same time, in an enterprise that is conservatively estimated to be able to pay 15 per cent a year. Now is the time to holler the loudest for the electric road, for it is within our reach, whatever the other roads may do.—Grangeville Standard.

To Rebuild Ranges.

Brome grass promises to become the most valuable all-purpose hay and pasture plant in the northwest. It has taken the place of clovers and alfalfa in the semi arid districts. The grass is the first stock feed to appear in the spring and the last to fall before the snow covers the earth in the winter. It gives an abundant summer pasture and produces fine crops of hay and seed. Some farmers in Idaho and Washington state that they have made more money from brome grass than from any crop on the land. A field of 400 acres of brome grass is one of the curiosities of a farm near Moscow, Idaho. It lies on the slope of the mountain and occupies rolling hillsides, dipping to every point of the compass. The owner has a band of 3,000 sheep which he pastures on the brome grass from late in the autumn until May. The field gave two cuttings of seed and is now occupied for sheep pasture.—Sumpter Reporter.

Death Discloses Sex.

Joe Monahan dropped dead on Sucker creek, Malheur county, Monday. That fact of itself was enough to startle that quiet community in which "Joe" had resided for eighteen years as a farmer and stockraiser, but when friendly neighbors started to prepare the body for burial it was pronounced that "Joe" Monahan was a woman. For eighteen years the woman masqueraded as a man, owned her farm and stock and performed all the labor allotted to the average husbandman. For years she has ridden after her cattle over the mountains and plain, camping with men under all conditions and in no instance was her sex questioned. Time over and again "Joe" Monahan has been summoned by the sheriff to serve as a juror. In every case she responded promptly and Keep Everlastingly at it.

A lesson which Dalles people can learn from their neighbors is to boom their home town. A resident of that little city never misses an opportunity to tout the Hood River horn. If you don't believe it, watch the Oregonian and if E. L. Smith or some other fellow is in Portland, just that sure you'll find that he has had the ear of some reporter, and that's right. No place in Oregon furnishes such a diversity of subjects for a "spiel" (to use a slang phrase) on what inducements she offers home-seekers than does The Dalles. What she needs is the "spiel."—The Dalles Chronicle.

MARKET REVIEWED

EXPLANATION OF THE VARIABLE BEEF MARKET.

Buyers Claim They Are Doing the Right Thing and Explain Apparent Discrepancies—Farmers Don't Accept the Explanation Readily, and Having Plenty of Feed Are Holding Most of Their Stock. There is a difference of opinion between the buyers and the growers on the beef situation, and while the price stays down as quoted by the market men, the farmers are holding their steers for a raise, claiming that they are not getting what they should for their meat. Steers are quoted at $3.25 and $3.50 and a few days ago a sale was made for 4 cents, and now the growers are all claiming that the buyers are trying to rob them of their meat and incidentally their money. The buyers on the other hand, claim that they are doing the right thing by the farmers, and explain the situation by saying that the 4-cent sale was on time delivery, that the men who made the sale will have to hold their stock for a couple of months before delivery, and feed them for the market. This makes the meat well worth 4 cents, where it would be worth only 3 1/2, or 3 3/4 if sold at this time and delivered at once. The dealers say that the market will raise inside of two months and that it will have to wait for that time to come before they can sell at that figure. Any number of cows can be gotten for $2.50 and $2.75, and when the butchers can get that kind of meat at that price it would be foolish for them to make large investments in steers at 4 cents; in fact, they say the difference in price is too great to be just, and therefore quote the steers at the lower figure. The farmers, too, are taking an independent view of the matter, and say that as they have the feed on hand to keep their stock until spring comes and the market opens higher that they will use it and feed until such a time as they can get a return from their feed and the time that they have put in attending to their stock. In this condition the question rests: the buyers are willing to pay the small figures for their meat, and the farmers are not willing to take it; one will buy and the other won't sell, and while the war wages the steer fattens and increases in value.
