AMONG THE EXCHANGES OF THE INLAND EMPIRE

Reclaiming Baker County Land.
It is with much satisfaction and pleasure that the Democrat is able to announce that the well-boring machinery for the smaing of the artesian wells on the 8,000 acre tract of land recently s id to a New York syndicate, will arrive in Baker City in about two weeks, and the work of boring the necessary wells for the irrigation of the property will begin. The company, known as the Oregon Land & Improvement Company, of which R. L. Bostwick, of Jamestown, New York, is at the head, have already arranged for a large colony of people from West-tern New York to occupy these lands, and if the artesian wells are a success, the colonists will start for Eastern Oregon about April 1, The lands, lave head says head so Eastern Oregon about April 1. The lands Lave been sold in 40 and 80 acre tracts on the installment plan, and the settlers will all be workers and producers. The O. R. & N. company has arranged to transport the colony here and it is believed by

The question of the constitution-ality of the irrigation law which was passed by the last legislature, is being argued before the supreme court today. Several questions are

Some day I'll come to that still place And bid the vintner amouth my bed. No hurry of departure there, No waking when the morn is red.

From that still hostelry of rest

I'll mark the seasons pass along and clean forget the things unwon The pain of the unfinished song.

No man will come when dawn is chill (The false hopes of my dreams to break) To tell me that the horses walt Or of some beat that I must take.

Night will not find me journeying (Where pallid roads in dusk are set) On some fool's errand down the world, Hag ridden by an old regret.

Noon will not find me blustering
About the antercoms of kings.

A meddler, caring not what comes,
But junketing with many things.

Some day I'll turn my horse's head To that still hostelry of rest And vex no more the south and north With matters of the cast and west. —Theodore Roberts in Independent.
