Opposition to the Repeal of Objectionable Laws are Craftily Sparring for Time-Public Land Is Disappearing at Astonishing Rate and the Graft Must be Stopped-Laws Should Foster Home Building and Settlement

Washington, Jan. 25 .- (Special to the East Oregonian) - The statement is heard around the capitol and the hotel lobbles of Washington that there is no possible chance of land law repeal this season of congress. The opponents of legislation which will repeal certain of the land laws and check land stealing, admit that some amendments or modifications and check land stealing, admit that some amendments or modifications of the existing laws may be made, but that the repeal absolutely of any of these laws and particularly the desert land law is a thing impossible successful to mind very forcibly similar statements.

similar statements and prophesies heard at just about a corresponding date of the year that the national irrigation bill became a law, much to the surprise of even some of its

It is probable that these opponents of land repeal are speaking ad-visably. Whatever they may them-selves think on the subject, they are anxious to secure a general impres-sion, if possible, that these laws cannot be repealed. It is recognized, however, by the best informed statesmen on the subject that the question has now come to the point where it must be met squarely. The public land is disappearing into speculative and corpo-rate holdings at such an enormously rapid rate that it will do to tempo rize the question no longer.

Unless effective legislation is se cured, and comparatively at once, there will be little left worth legislating about.

"We have reached the point on is land question," said a prominent western senator, "where we have got to substitute acts for have got to substitute acts for words. We have got to do some-thing at this session of congress. The opposition to this repeal of the land laws,—the desert act, the com-muter's clause and the timber act muter's clause and the timber act—are craftly sparring for time, as as though the question were a brand new one, and one which we did not understand in the west.

It is far too well understood that

THE REAL TEST

Of Herpicide Is In Giving It a Thorough Trial.

There is only one test by which to judge of the efficiency of any article and that is by its ability to do that which it is intended to do. Many hair vigors may look nice and smell nice, but the point is—do they eradicate Dandruff and stop failting hair?

No, they do not, but Herpicide does, because it goes to the root of the evil and kills the germ that attacks the papilla from whence the hair gets its life.
