THE CHIEF FORESTER

BRIEF SKETCH OF GIFFORD FORD PINCHOT'S LIFE.

Was Made Chief Forester of the United States at the age of 33—Studied in France, Germany and Switzerland—West is His Widest Field of Endeavor.

There are few men at Washington who are likely to leave a deeper or more lasting mark upon the country's economic life than the young man who five years ago, at the age of 33, became forester of the United States.

Presidents, cabinets and legislators come and go, but if Gifford Pinchot lives he may reasonably hope to devote the space of a generation to the important work he has in hand. And the nature of the work is such that its influence will be felt for a thousand years to come.

Mr. Pinchot was deliberately educated for the career in which he is now engaged. A native of Connecticut, he graduated from Yale in 1889 and then studied forestry in France, Germany, Switzerland and Austria.

He began his first systematic forest work in Biltmore, North Carolina, in January 1892, on the famous estate of George W. Vanderbilt. He also served as a member of the National Forest Commission, which drew the boundaries of the Cleveland forest reserves.

He has been a large contributor to the literature of the subject which supplies his life work and has done much in this way to bring it home to the popular comprehension. He became forester under the department of Agriculture on July 1st, 1898, and has gradually perfected the organization of a superb working force of young men which now covers the entire country.

In the south and in the Adirondack region of New York his plans for scientific lumbering and reforestation have been quite generally accepted by those engaged in the industry. It is in the great mountain regions of the West, however, that Mr. Pinchot finds his widest and most important field. Here the relation of the forest to the economic life of the entire community is much deeper and more far-reaching than anywhere else.

The preservation of the forest is not merely a question of a continued supply of timber in its raw and manufactured forms, but it is also a question of a continued supply of timber in its raw and manufactured forms, but it is also a question of conserving the water supply upon which agriculture and mining are directly, and all other kinds of business indirectly, dependent.

60,000 ITEMS PER YEAR.

Enormous Amount of News Published by This Paper, Yearly.

Each issue of the Daily East Oregonian contains an average of 210 separate and distinct items of news—local, state and general, exclusive of the editorial page. This amounts to 1,260 news items per week, 5,040 per month and 60,480 per year.

The telegraphic news service of the East Oregonian is the largest service sold by the Scripps-McRae News association to any paper outside of a city of 20,000 population, and covers briefly every item covered at tedious length by the great Associated Press organization.

The Baker City Herald published in a city claiming 12,000 population, proudly called attention to the fact in a recent issue, that its pages on that date, contained 47 distinct news items. Compare that number with 210, printed by the East Oregonian each day in a city of less than 7,000 people and some adequate idea of the wide scope of news covered by this paper will be gained.

Frank Sloan and Otis McCarty were in town Monday from Butter creek. Otis is making arrangements for a rabbit drive which he will have soon.

F. S. Bramwell was here again Monday and looked at some land up the river a short distance. On his return he said that the land is all right and if his company can secure sufficient land they will put in some beets this year and show the people what can be done. Under the Violets.

Her hands are cold, her face is white; No more her pulses come and go; Her eyes are shut to life and light. Fold the white vesture in snow, And lay her where the violets blow.

But beneath a graven stone, To plead for tears with alien eyes, A slender cross of wood alone Shall say that here a maiden lies. In peace beneath the peaceful skies,

And gray old trees of hugest limb Shall wheel their circling shadows round To make the scorching sunlight dim That breaks the greenness from the ground. And drop their dead leaves on her mound.

When o'er their boughs the squirrels run And through their leaves the robins call, And, rippling in the autumn sun, The acorns and the chestnuts fall, Doubt not that she will heed them all.

For her the morning choir shall sing Its matins from the branches high, And every minstrel voice of spring That trills beneath the April sky Shall greet her with its earliest cry.

When, turning round their dial track, Eastward the lengthening shadows pass, Her little mourners, clad in black, The crickets, sliding through the grass, Shall pipe for her an evening mass.

At last the rooftops of the trees Shall find the prison where she lies And bear the buried dust they seize. In leaves and blossoms to the skies. So may the soul that warmed it rise!

If any born of kinder blood Should ask, What maiden lies below? Say only this: A tender bud That tried to blossom in the snow Lies withered where the violets blow.—Holmes.

Speak Gently.

Speak gently: it is better far To rule by love than fear. Speak gently: let no harsh words mar The good we might do here.

Speak gently to the little child: His love is sure to gain. Teach it in accents soft and mild. It may not long remain.

Speak gently to the aged one: Grieve not the careless heart; The sands of life are nearly run; Let such in peace depart.

Speak gently, kindly to the poor: Let no harsh tone be heard; They have enough they must endure Without an unkind word.

Speak gently to the erring, know They must have talked in vain; Perchance unkindness made them so: Oh, win them back again!

Speak gently: love doth whisper low The vows that true hearts bind, And gently friendship's accents flow, Affection's voice is kind.

Let them call it mischief; When it is past and prospered, 'twill be virtue.—Ben Jonson.

Don't worry about the next generation. With such smart fathers it should be able to hold its own.
