IMMIGRANTS WORK HARD.

Foreigners Take On New Life in American Surroundings.

Not only does immigration bring to America the strongest, healthiest and most energetic and adventurous of the work people of Europe and Asia, but those who come work much harder than they did at home.

Migration tears a man away from the traditions, the routine, the social props, on which he has learned to rely, and throws him among strangers upon his own resources. He must swim or drown. At the same time he earns higher wages and eats more nourishing food than he had ever thought within the reach of one in his station. His ambition is fired, he is stirred by the new tonic of feeling himself actually rising in the world. He pictures to himself a home of his own, he economizes and saves money to send to his friends and family or to return to his beloved land a person of importance.

Watch a gang of Italians shoveling dirt under an Irish boss, or a sweatshop of Jewish tailors under a small contractor, and you shall see feverish production of wealth as an American born citizen would scarcely endure. Partly fear, partly hope, make the fresh immigrant the hardest, if not the most intelligent worker in our industries.—John R. Commons in The Chautauquan for February.

Sol Louie, a sub-chief of the Coueur d'Alene Indians, is said to be heartbroken because of his wife's infidelity.

There are two things in life for which a man is never prepared—twins.

WISCONSIN BENEFACTOR.

Pioneer Legislator Who Made a Law That Lives Today.

"Gabe" Bouck of Oshkosh, Wis., who died a few days ago, was one of "Homer's men." As soon speak of Colonel Achilles as of being Colonel Gabriel Bouck. Titles did not belong to him. He did not need them, says a writer.

George Washington and Abraham Lincoln first, if you insisted. After them "Gabe" Bouck, among all the blue-shirted stalwart men who cut down the pine trees in Northern Wisconsin. This was why:

In the old days unscrupulous jobbers would hire a crew of men and take them into the woods. All winter they would work and would cut down a great store of logs. Wages were never paid until the snow broke up and the men came out of the woods. Then the workmen would be told that times were hard; that a chattel mortgage covered all the timber they had cut, and they might go whistle for their wages.

"Gabe" Bouck saw that an injustice was being played on the lumbermen and he acted accordingly. In the face of wealthy opposition he introduced a bill and forced it to a passage. Ever since the lumbermen have known it as the "log lien law." It gave to the men who had cut the timber an absolute lien for the amount of their wages on the logs they cut.

Since then "Gabe" Bouck has been one of the best known men in all the vast stretches of the Wisconsin woods.

The president had the "say" and fixed the salaries of the Panama canal commission at $12,000 per year, with an additional $15 per day and expenses paid while on duty on the isthmus.
